"Information" is the clue to solving Beach burglaries

By PAM VANDEVEER
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

Don Fox and Lin Hightower may appear to be normal customers as they enter a Virginia Beach restaurant. That is, until they pull out a badge rather than place an order.

They are police officers, burglary detectives with the Virginia Beach Police Department, and such calls are just a part of their everyday investigation of burglaries in the Beach's 2nd precinct, which extends roughly from the oceanfront area to Great Neck Rd.

Fox and Hightower were hand-picked to be Virginia Beach detectives six years ago. Considered to be among the cream of the crop, they first proved themselves as able uniformed policemen.

"That's where everyone begins," says Hightower of the Beach's 360 sworn officers.

Today the pair wears casual street clothes on the job and drives an unmarked car. A day's activities may include questioning victims and suspects, visiting the site of a burglary, developing leads or arresting a suspect.

The average age of a burglar in Virginia Beach is 15 to 17 years old, Fox estimates. "There are very few professional burglars in this city," he says. "I'd guess that 60 percent are juveniles. And experience has shown that burglars are generally repeaters."

Their approach to solving a case is extremely systematic—from checking out a suspect's previous police record through a computer, to interviewing the victim, to obtaining a warrant and making an arrest.

But there are multitudes of clues to be picked up and pieced together—a credit card receipt found inside a stolen calculator, a nervous suspect's shaken story that conflicts with that of another suspect, a troublesome customer who has frequented the same three bars that have all been recently burglarized.

"It may be just one clue that solves 40 burglaries," Hightower explains.

Keeping all the clues in mind for one particular case isn't easy. Multiply that by an average of 20 cases a month per detective and the scope of the job unfolds.

Then there is the paper work that must be completed on each case.

"There's approximately three-and-a-half hours of paperwork to be done for each arrest you make," says Fox. "So if you make five arrests in one case you've got at least two full days of paperwork to do."

There just isn't enough time on the job to get it all done, Hightower states matter-of-factly. "So you squeeze it in at home."

But the job is worth the extra work, both men agree. "There's a lot of self-satisfaction that comes with clearing a case," says Hightower.

Looking back, Fox recalls that a desire to help people led him to police work. "I was with the military in Washington D.C. The police force seemed like a good way to help people, so I joined."

"The respect you get from the community makes you want to stay a policeman," says Hightower. "The majority have respect, and I don't see it declining in this city."

He adds that police work offers that occasional thrill and excitement not found in an everyday desk job.

Both detectives say it is difficult to live up to the television image of a policeman.

"First off, if I drove like Starsky and Hutch I'd be fired immediately," laughs Hightower. "People watch Kojak lift fingerprints off burlap and expect us to do the same."

"Fingerprints and trace evidence don't solve cases. Information is what solves cases. A detective isn't worth the ground he walks on if he doesn't get information."

"You've always got to keep your ears open," says Fox. "You may overhear a bit of a conversation in a restaurant that could be a clue. On our breathe-easy days we try to get out on the street and just talk to people and develop information."

"It's a funny thing, but people seem to want to tell a police officer everything," Hightower explains. "They want to talk to you. They'll tell on their brother and sister."

"Sometimes we'll just be driving down the street and people will flag us down—they just want to talk and tell us things."

"There's a lot of public relations work in this job," Fox concludes. "People automatically expect you to solve their case. Sometimes it's hard to make them realize that theirs is not the only case you are working on."

"We must constantly reassure people we'll do what we can. We try to continue to make contact with them even if there's no new clues, just to let them know we are still concerned about their particular case."

"We try to do the very best we can," Hightower sums up. "But we're only humans. We're certainly not supermen."

There's always something going on at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center, whether it's a casual game of basketball, as pictured here, or a fast race across the Olympic-sized swimming pool. Any Virginia Beach resident is eligible to use the center's facilities. The building, located in the Kempsville area, is open 86 hours a week.

Rec center offers best in sports, leisure activities

By PAM VANDEVEER
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

Virginia Beach residents don't have to belong to a health spa or country club to be able to enjoy an Olympic-sized indoor heated swimming pool, racquetball, handball, exercise rooms or tennis.

These facilities and many more are all available at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center, 800 Monmouth Lane. The cost? Only one dollar a year.

Winter registration underway

Now is the time to register for special winter classes at the center. Programs are now available for all classes and activities scheduled January through June. Times are programmed for different age groups, with activities planned for pre-teens, teens, adults, senior citizens and handicapped individuals.

The one-and-a-half year old center is open seven days, "86 hours a week," according to assistant director Jerry Witt. Hours are 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 9 p.m. on Sunday.

Witt says the center is currently serving an average of 42-45,000 Virginia Beach residents a month. "They range in age from five to about 92," he says. "If there's any one age group missing, I'd say it's probably the adults in their 20's and 30's. But we have activities for all age groups."

Chinese cooking to bowling

A tour through the three-story building (which is totally accessible to the handicapped) backs up Witt's statement.

There are rooms for playing cards, bridge classes, backgammon classes, dance classes, and a lounge where regular productions are scheduled.

Cooking classes specialize in everything from Chinese to microwave cooking. There's even a demonstration kitchen that actually rolls out into a large banquet room.

There are bowling lanes, a teen and pre-teen lounge complete with pool tables and pinball machines, a basketball court and handball court.

"The exercise room is open only when supervised," Witt points out. "We offer exercise classes, too."

The swimming pool area is an attention-getter. A two-story ceiling allows balcony viewing of the pool. Along with swimming classes, times are scheduled for family swim, adult swim and an in-house swim team.

Outdoors, the grounds include a fenced-in handicapped track and field area, and baseball, tennis and basketball courts.

Special weekend programs

Witt is especially enthusiastic about the recreation center's upcoming special weekend programs.

"On weekends in January, February and March we will feature special events of an informative type. We'll give participants a chance to get involved in it."

In the future Witt says the center is looking into the possibility of starting "A very low key boxing program."

"It will just teach the basics and we will have qualified instructors. We don't want to train bullies, but teach the merits of boxing as an art."

"Our goal is to provide a well-rounded recreational center for the citizens of Virginia Beach," he said.

Virginia Beach residents wishing to use the recreation center facilities need to get an ID card at the center. Cards cost $1 and may be obtained from 2 to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Proof of residency in Virginia Beach is required.

The picture ID cards are good for five years, but must be revaluated each year.

Craft exhibition opens in Virginia Beach

An exhibition of outstanding craft items will be on display in the galleries of the Virginia Beach Arts Center Jan. 3 through Jan. 31. Featured in the exhibition will be the work of a jeweler, a woodworker, a potter and a fiber artist. All works were brought to the Center from out-of-state and will be available for purchase.

Artists included in the exhibition are:

Philadelphia artist Nora Johnson who will contribute fiber work to the exhibition. Ms. Johnson is a resident of the Philadelphia area and has exhibited extensively in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware. Her large works are represented in numerous corporate collections, including the General Electric Company and the Sheraton Hotels. Ms. Johnson received her B.F.A. from Moore College of Art in Philadelphia.

Davis Strider of Greenville, North Carolina, will be represented by a variety of contemporary woodwork. Included in this exhibition are a desk and chair, mirrors, and a unique three-drawer work titled "Self Portrait with Three Navels." Mr. Strider recently received his M.F.A. degree from East Carolina University at Greenville, North Carolina.

Vickie Sedman, who is currently an Assistant Professor at the Tyler School of Art in Philadelphia. Ms. Sedman has work in the collection of the Columbus Gallery of Art and the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Accompanying the fiber, wood and metal crafts persons will be Cathy Yokum of Putnam, Connecticut, who will contribute several large ceramic items to the exhibition.

Starmalds sail into the sunset

The aquatic staff of the Virginia Beach Recreation Center will present a synchronized swimming show entitled "Starmalds Sail Into the Sunset," Jan. 20, 7-8 p.m. This special swimming display will be performed by "The Starmalds" an A.A.U. competing team. This program is free to the public and spectator seating overlooking the pool is available.

For further information contact Audrey Hobbs at 499-1281 or at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center, 800 Monmouth Lane.

Pot luck supper

The U.S.S. John F. Kennedy Enlisted Wives Club will hold a pot luck supper on Jan. 5 at 6 p.m. at the Ship "W" Shore building on NOB.

Free babysitting is provided. New members are always welcomed.

Beach Arts Center sponsors open house

On Sunday, Jan. 7, the Virginia Beach Arts Center will hold an open house for the general public, 2 to 5 p.m. The purpose of the Open House is to acquaint the community with the winter class offerings of the Center and allow them an opportunity to meet the Center instructors and ask questions about classes they may be interested in taking. Those who wish to register for any of the 34 classes may do so at that time.

Along with the usual wide variety of classes generally offered, the Center will sponsor several classes for the first time. In the children's class area, a pottery class for children is a new offering, along with a Saturday afternoon visual arts event called "The Saturday Circus." During the Circus, which meets every Saturday afternoon for six weeks, children 6-12 will be entertained with a variety of visual arts related events, including films and studio experiences.

A new adult offering will be a mural workshop in which interested persons will work on murals in Virginia Beach under the direction of artist, Tony Cacalano, who is producing several murals for the City under a City of Virginia Beach CETA grant.

The Arts Center is located at 1711 Arctic Avenue in Virginia Beach.

Detective Lin Hightower on the job in the Beach's 2nd precinct.

Commentary

Resolution for 1979

It's New Year's resolution time again, and one resolution that seems appropriate for every is to take care of our health in 1979.

In Virginia Beach we are especially lucky to have numerous sports and exercise facilities available. The Virginia Beach Recreation Center offers both exercise classes and free time to use a variety of sports equipment -- all for $1, a bargain in anyone's books.

If health clubs or spas are more to your liking, the city has several to choose from.

Virginia Beach's environment is particularly conducive to many sports. Swimming, water skiing, boating, surfing, bicycling and jogging are just a few.

Making an effort to keep fit is becoming increasingly more important as the years go by. Hectic work and family schedules make participation in a sport a rare luxury for too many Beach individuals.

The holiday rush has subsided, individual schedules are returning to a more relaxed pace. What better time to decide to make an investment in ourselves this new year.

After all, 1979 is already here and we aren't getting any younger.

Nation should be proud

The perfect performance of the Pioneer space probes sampling the atmosphere of Venus is really no surprise. Ever since America's space engineers got into the business, flawless missions and uncanny precision have been the rule rather than the exception.

The surprises are all in the data coming back from Venus. Scientists may have to revise their theories about the history of the planets in our solar system. The presumption that Venus has a history similar to that of Earth and Mars is not being borne out in the early analysis of the Pioneer transmissions.

In particular, scientists are worried about the "greenhouse effect" which could change the Earth's climate as carbon dioxide builds up in the atmosphere from the burning of fossil fuels and traps heat underneath. Venus seems to represent a greenhouse run wild. Its atmosphere is almost pure carbon dioxide, and its surface temperature a torrid 900 degrees. How did it get that way?

Scientists will now know more of the answers -- thanks to the engineers at the Ames Research Center who scored a technological bullseye on a planet 33.5 million miles from Earth. Nearly a decade after our space program saw the triumph of the first Apollo landing on the moon, it's good to know that our expertise in space is as sharp as ever.

It's just the same song

The tune is familiar to the people of the Soviet Union.

Production of scarce consumer items and food supplies will be increased next year, according to a report made to Communist Party boss Leonid I. Brezhnev.

But similar promises have been made to Soviet consumers in a series of "five-year plans". The new pledge will be routinely acknowledged in the budget, which sets goals and priorities for all branches of industry and agriculture in the Soviet economy.

And, significantly, the budget envisions no cuts in military spending, set at about $26 billion for 1979.

Since realistic observers agree that the actual expenditure for weapons must be more than four times the published amount, the budgets serves no more than a cosmetic purpose. The figures designed to encourage the Soviet consumer and ease the concerns of potential Soviet adversaries are contradicted by the history of Communist performance.

A people dependent upon its government for its consumer needs and as its security is conditioned to seeing its refrigerators sacrificed to missile silos and its automobiles to heavy tanks -- until the next five-year plan, of course.

Cheers for the new year

A New Year's resolution to take up a sport to promote better health is an investment that will pay off in the years to come. This Virginia Beach man enjoys an early morning jog along the ocean front.

Yesterday's Sun: Jan. 2, 1969

Another east-west road planned

No one is willing to say when, but eventually Virginia Beach will have a new major thoroughfare, probably a four-lane undivided highway paralleling Virginia Beach Blvd. and extending from the oceanfront to Independence Blvd.

While in some places entirely new roads must be built to complete the highway, in others, existing roads will be widened and upgraded.

... South of the Expressway the road will begin at Norfolk Avenue and the Oceanfront and follow the existing street to its end at the railroad terminal in Virginia Beach Borough. Plans now call for the road to parallel the tracks westward, employing part of existing Southern Blvd. crossing the northernmost edge of NAS Oceana and running into existing Potter's Road.

... Potter's Road will be utilized. It will run back into Lynnhaven Road, but will then curve to parallel closely the toll road westward into Princess Anne Plaza. This new part of the road will come into Continental Street by opening a dedicated street just north of Lynnhaven Elementary School.

The part of the new road will then follow Continental Street to Plaza Trail, then cut through an area where a few houses stand into Chester Street. Chester Street will be followed to Rosemont Road. From that point to the land fill area where the future amphitheater will rise, a new road will generally parallel the toll road. The path of the existing road from the land fill to Independence Blvd. will complete the thoroughfare.

Drinks may be served tomorrow

The hour is fast approaching when the first legal cocktail will be served in Virginia Beach in many years.

Most of the larger restaurants in the city have applied for a mixed beverage license from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. Application was made on the first possible day, following certification of the Nov. 5 favorable referendum on the question. That date was Dec. 23, and a waiting period of ten days is mandatory. The ten days is up tomorrow, Jan. 3.

Solution expected on surfing

Harold Whitehurst, director of Parks and Recreation and head of the Virginia Beach Surfing Committee, says that proposed solutions to the surfing problems of the city will be made by the City Council within the next two months.

The main problems confronting the city's surfing population are limited space and strict regulations.

Progress is Virginia Beach keynote for new year

The year 1969 promises to be another year of progress and change for Virginia Beach.

Kempsville will have its own library, a welcome addition to the cultural aspects of our city.

In the next few weeks city officials will move into the lavish new Administration Building at Princess Anne.

New Shopping centers will be built, at Hilltop, on Independence Blvd. at Pembroke and everywhere one looks.

On barking dogs

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

In reference to the amendment to the City Code of Virginia Beach that makes owners of barking dogs subject to fine and possible disposal of the animals, Councilwoman Oberndorf is the only one of the City Council who has any common sense.

Dogs will bark and neighbors will complain. The council has really opened up Pandora's Box with this change. I fail to see how a dog's bark is more offensive than children roaming in the streets all day screaming at the top of their voices, power saws and lawn mowers running at 7 a.m., noisy sports cars and motorcycles roaring up and down streets at all hours, and all other normal neighborhood noises.

Barking dogs should be quiet at night. I nonetheless feel that with all the crime we have in our city, the police should have more to do than get involved in neighborhood complaints such as these.

Whatever happened to man's best friend?

Walter L. Grant

"World's largest regulated city"

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Since the Virginia Beach City Council has made it a misdemeanor for a dog to bark, why didn't it go all the way and make it a misdemeanor to look at the rising sun or the setting sun or the stars at night or any of nature's other normal happenings?

Does it occur to anyone that law is not a joke but a way to facilitate human and animal life and not to

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

Your number's up

By Harvey J. Ridinger
Field Representative

Employers must use 1978 form W-2 to report wages

Here is a last minute reminder to employers about the new way to report employee's 1978 wages for social security purposes.

There's also something new to read those reports-a machine called optical scanner that translates the reports to the magnetic tape language that a computer can understand.

The Social Security Administration is concerned because some early reports are being received in a format the optical scanner can't read-and that means more expensive manual processing.

Beginning with 1978 wages, employers are to use Form W-2 (Wage and Tax Statement) to report their worker's earnings. Form W-2 has been revised for 1978 so it can be read by the scanner.

The Form W-2's are printed three to a page, and Copy A of the form is to be submitted to social security in just that way--three to a page.

Some employers are going to the trouble of cutting the forms apart, which means they cannot be processed by the optical scanner.

Other employers are sending in the Form 941's that were used previously for earnings reports. And some are using older Form W-2's. Those forms cannot be processed by machine either.

Employers should use only the 1978 Form W-2's and the entire page must be sent even if one or two of the forms are blank.

The changeover is part of the switch to annual reporting of employee earnings. Reports were submitted quarterly in previous years.

All Forms W-2 should be submitted with Form W-3 (Transmittal of Income and Tax Statements).

The forms are available from local Internal Revenue Service offices or from private printers.

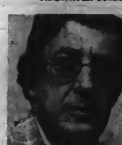

The deadline for submitting the forms is February 28, 1979.

Detailed instructions for completing the forms are given in the December 1977 Circular E (Supplement), Employer's Tax Guide. Employers who don't have a copy of Circular E can get one from the nearest Internal Revenue Service Office.

For further information, contact your nearest Social Security office. The Norfolk office is located at 3661 E. Virginia Beach Blvd. and the phone number is 441-6401.

Don't let the new year get you down. A new year is just beginning.

TIDEWATER COMMUNITY COLLEGE-VA BEACH

Today College Counts

By Dr. William Bridges
Director of Continuing Education

With the holiday season over, have you thought of spending winter "inside time" learning something new? Tidewater Community College registration for the winter quarter is still in progress through January 9 with a wide variety of credit programs and non-credit continuing education courses.

The College offers classes at on-campus and off-campus locations all over the Tidewater area: Chesapeake, Virginia Beach, Portsmouth, and Norfolk. Classes are offered in high and junior high schools, community centers, outreach centers, and military bases.

Courses are available from G.E.D. preparatory and developmental work through two-year university parallel programs for transfer to a four-year college or university. In between are numerous one-year certificate and diploma courses, as well as two-year degree programs in the occupational and technical areas.

Students join us in learning for many reasons: to change job skills, to upgrade job skills for promotion, to prepare for entering the world of hobby and fun experiences, to meet new and interesting people, and for the joy of learning.

The following list of program areas will give you an idea of the vast selection available at your community college. Call us and find out how to begin the year with a new learning experience.

Associate in Arts (A.A.) in Fine Arts and Liberal Arts; Associate in Science (A.S.) in Business Administration, Education, Engineering, General Studies, and Science; Associate in Applied Science (A.A.S.) in Business Technology (Accounting, Banking/Finance, Data Processing, Hotel-Restaurant-Institutional Management, Management, Merchandising, Real Estate, Secretarial Science, and Transportation Management); Engineering/Industrial Technology (Drafting/Design and Electrical/Electronics); Public Service Technology (Fire Science, Community and Social Service, Police Science, and Recreation Leadership).

Diploma programs include the new Residential and Commercial Building Management program which will be highlighted in this column next week.

The Certificate Curriculums offer many interesting and new occupational learning opportunities.

If any one of these listed programs interests you, call TCC today for further information and to receive the catalog and application. The Office of Continuing Education can answer questions and direct you to the proper office. Call 547-4515, 427-3070, or 484-2121 soon. Today college counts!

Beach arts activities

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

On behalf of the arts groups, institutions and organizations and the many individual artists residing in Tidewater the Metropolitan Arts Congress would like to express our appreciation to the Virginia Beach Sun for printing two of the public service advertisements issued by the National Endowment for the Arts in your Dec. 20 issue.

We applaud your continued interest and coverage of arts activities in Virginia Beach and urge you to continue to carry items announcing arts activities in order that Virginia Beach residents can participate and Virginia Beach arts groups can continue to build their audience.

Sincerely,

Three Beach schools earn accreditation

The Secondary Commission and the Elementary Commission of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools awarded accreditation to Brandon Junior High, Fairfield, and Green Run elementary schools during the Association's 83rd annual meeting in Atlanta Georgia, in December.

Brandon, Fairfield, and Green Run are the latest of the new city schools in Virginia Beach to receive accreditation by the organization. The accreditation of schools is based on an evaluation to determine if they meet not only the needs of the students and community but also the standards of quality of the Association.

Fairfield and Green Run recently completed self-studies and were reviewed by a visiting committee of professional educators representing the Association's membership. With the exception of the new White Oaks Elementary School, all Virginia Beach public schools are now fully accredited.

White Oaks, which opened in the fall of 1978, immediately began the process by filing for accreditation candidacy with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

Founded in 1895, the Southern Association is a voluntary, nongovernmental agency composed of nearly 10,000 colleges and universities, occupational institutions, and secondary and elementary schools. Headquartered in Atlanta, it is one of six regional accrediting associations in the United States and encompasses 11 southern states from Virginia to Texas.

The purpose of regional accreditation is to improve the quality of education. Each member school system must carry on a continuing program of improvement and, to maintain its accreditation, must submit annual reports and undergo periodic reevaluation.

Cox debaters convincing

Cox High School's debate team apparently convinced a lot of people at a day-long invitational debate tournament recently at Meadowbrook High School in Chesterfield County.

The team claimed three of the five top awards, including the best fourman team. The affirmative team, Judy Robey and Anne Sarrett, won a second place award in that category, as did the negative team, made up of Scott Commander and Doreen Mooney.

Teams from eight high schools competed in the event.

Joyner, Puster exchange vows

Miss Tamara Lynn Joyner and Dr. George Valentine Puster Jr. exchanged vows Saturday, Dec. 9 at 5 p.m. at Bruton Parish Church in Williamsburg. The Rev. Allen Coffey officiated.

Miss Joyner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cortlandt Hunter Joyner of Virginia Beach. Puster is the son of Rev. and Mrs. George Valentine Puster Sr. of Virginia Beach.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her gown was white satin and sateen over taffeta accented with silk Venice lace. The moulded bodice featured a high bard neck and illusion neckline. The modified empire line flowed softly into a sateen skirt embellished with silk Venice lace and chapel train. Her lace covered half Camelot cap held a walking length veil of illusion edged in Venice lace.

The bride carried a bouquet of white gardenias and baby's breath accented with pink sweetheart roses.

Maid of honor was Denise Carol Setchel of Virginia Beach. Bridesmaids were Miss Carolyn Alexander of Chester, Miss Susan Miranian of Boston, Mass., and Miss Shelly Gilliam of Richmond. They wore formal length burgandy velvet skirts and beige Venice lace blouses with necklines trimmed with velvet to match the skirts.

The bride's mother wore a long gown of pale rose quana, fashioned with empire waist and long tapered sleeves. The bridegroom's mother wore a long mauve chiffon gown with empire waist and chiffon cape.

David Walden Puster of Williamsburg was the best man. Ushers were William P. Joyner, Robert H. Joyner and Mark Puster, all of Virginia Beach.

The church was decorated for Christmas in the traditional Colonial Williamsburg manner with candlelight and white poinsettias.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the Sheraton Patriot Inn in Williamsburg.

Virginia Beach happenings

Business women meet

The monthly meeting of Tidewater chapter, American Business Women's Association will be held on Jan. 8 at the Sword and Kilt Restaurant, Thalhimer. Social hour will be at 6 p.m. and dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Mark Forget with Wheat Security. The vocational speaker for the month of January will be Donna Williams.

Barraco speaks at St. Matthews

The Womens Club of St. Matthews Catholic Church in Virginia Beach presents Mrs. Mary Barraco as guest speaker for its next monthly meeting to be held on Tuesday, Jan. 9, at 7:30 p.m.

Belgian born, a political prisoner under the Nazi regime during World War II, Mrs. Barraco is often referred to as a "one-woman task force of freedom." She strongly advocates faith, courage, love and unity as a basis for solutions to some of the world's major problems.

Mrs. Barraco was recently honored by the Daughters of the American Revolution and was presented with the Medal of Honor by that organization.

Take a bow GEORGE
OR when WASHINGTON crossed the DELAWARE he laughed all the way to the banks

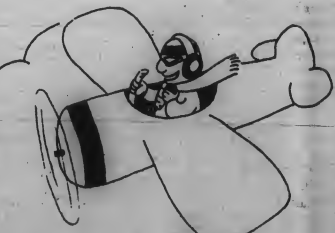

What George wanted to do was cross the Delaware on Christmas morning, surprise the British, and secure a badly needed victory.
What he needed was boats. Specially designed boats that could hold fifteen tons of men and artillery. That could move in either direction. Boats that had a draft of not more than 20 inches.
Happily, Robert Durham, a new American, had already designed and built them. And other new Americans invented their craft to buy them.
And Washington sailed into a victory that turned the tide of the Revolution. Buy U.S. Savings Bonds today. You'll have smooth sailing tomorrow.

New K Bonds pay 6% interest when held in maturity of 1 year (4% the first year). Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and interest tax may be deferred until redemption.

Virginia Beach Real Estate

Coastal Resource Management Legislation--Is More Necessarily Better?

By LIN J. COOPER
Director of Communications
The Virginia Beach Association

There is a bill under consideration in Richmond that should capture the interest of every Virginia Beach resident. As currently proposed, this legislation will manage coastal areas by requiring every individual who wishes to build or disturb the land up to 1000 feet inland from any tidal water, or sand dune, to secure a permit. A Shorelands Board, structured similarly to the already existent Wetlands Board, would be created to review cases and issue permits.

The implications of this piece of legislation are far-reaching. A thousand feet is an extremely wide, and some feel arbitrary, strip that will involve a considerable amount of acreage in the city. The bill's jurisdiction includes far more than just ocean or bayfront. This strip would include land bordering on all tributaries leading to the coast so that areas such as the Courthouse, parts of Kempsville, the Salem Road area and others would be affected. Virginia cities such as Colonial Heights, Richmond and Alexandria, not usually thought of as coastal, will also be affected because of the waterways flowing through them to the Atlantic.

Another problem with the proposed legislation that should be closely scrutinized is the lack of attention it gives to human needs such as expanding population and economic development. There is no housing reference included in the bill nor is land identified in any way as to environmental uniqueness or sensitivity. New Jersey adopted a similar coastal bill that has resulted in scattered, disjointed pockets of urbanization, frustrating efficient land use. The Virginia bill also fails to address the issue of compensation of private property owners who may, in effect, have their land taken from them.

A third difficult area with the legislation is the added government regulation. Federal monies for establishing boards and administering the program would flow into the state under the 1972 Coastal Zone Management Act. And federal money has traditionally meant federal control.

The building industry has a commitment to build housing for all citizens. Buy more and more with high demand, inflation, rising interest rates, and so on, a new home has become an elusive dream for a rising number of families. Housing is expensive in Virginia Beach; the city ranks third highest in the nation in lot prices alone. As now visualized, coastal legislation will inevitably add to the cost of new housing, not to mention what it will cost the taxpayer in administration costs. It will cause delays in timetables and remove available land from future development. Time is money. Shortages mean higher prices.

According to all studies made on the subject, including the federal government's own, it is almost axiomatic that whenever you add another government regulation to the building process, you add additional cost to the end product.

Virginia Beach is one of the fastest growing cities in the nation. Even though planners expect the population growth rate to decrease slightly, the area will continue to be for some years to come, a mecca for those seeking the lifestyle the Beach offers. That means substantially more new housing must be built in the years to come. The city itself commits to that in its land use plan when it recognizes its responsibility to "encourage and promote the development of a variety of housing types which are decent, safe, sanitary and affordable for all citizens."

The word affordable is an important one, because we are on the verge now of seeing our middle class—our policemen, teachers, young couples, and others—priced out of the housing market. To add additional cost to the price of new housing without being absolutely certain that such cost producing regulations are necessary, is folly.

All of us, including the homebuilding industry, have a vested interest in protecting the environment of our city. Homebuilders would welcome a clear set of guidelines and administrative procedures for development in a coastal jurisdiction. But heaping jurisdiction upon jurisdiction with a maze of separate boards and review authorities is not viable, reasonable answer to coastal management.

All Virginia Beach residents should look at the ordinances already in effect—the Soil Erosion and Sediment Control Ordinance, the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance, and the Wetlands bill. There is evidence to suggest that present ordinances, properly enforced, could effect the necessary environmental protection we all want for the city of Virginia Beach.

Board of Realtors Installs 1979 officers

The Virginia Beach Board of Realtors held their annual installation luncheon at the New Cavalier in Virginia Beach recently to install the new officers and directors for 1979. William Malone, 1st vice president elect of the Virginia Association of Realtors installed the new officers.

Austin M. Wilkins, vice president and general manager of Pembroke Realty, was installed as president. A retired Army officer, Wilkins has a multi-faceted background in the real estate industry having been involved in sales, management, mortgage banking and custom building.

Other officers installed were John Anderson and Dorcus Helfant as vice presidents, Les Brustle, secretary, and John Wright, treasurer. Directors for 1979 are Cliff Clifton, Dave Eckhardt, Andy Heatwole, Andrea Kelly, Joan Kennedy, Red VanKirk, Bud Laubach, Ed Meise, Dave Miller and Kit Owens.

Realtor of the year selected

F. Andrew Heatwole, a realtor with Kyros Realty, has been selected as Realtor of the Year by the Virginia Beach Board of Realtors. The honor was presented recently at the annual installation luncheon of the Virginia Beach Board.

Heatwole has served on the legislative and political affairs committee at both local and state levels for the Virginia Association of Realtors. He has contributed in-put from the Virginia Association of Realtors to the state committee on coastal resource management and has been appointed by the state of Virginia to serve on the advisory committee to Secretary of Commerce and Resources for the preparation of a coastal development handbook.

He has represented the Virginia Beach board during the recent AICUZ studies with the Navy in Virginia Beach.

Beach readers rank highest in the state

By PAM VANDEVEER
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

High income and high education level are two traits that make for high library usage. Virginia Beach residents have both of these characteristics, says Marcy Sims, director of the Virginia Beach Public Library System.

In fact, Virginia Beach has the highest library book circulation rate of all cities in the state of Virginia, she adds, with readers leaning towards "how to" books, or those that tell how to deal with their daily lives.

With these positive factors in its favor, the Beach's five-branch library system is growing rapidly. Five more branches are included in the city's five-year capital improvement program.

"Physically expanding the library system is one of two major areas we'll be working on for the next few years," explains Mrs. Sims. "According to standard, a city this size should have at least nine branches."

Plans for a new facility at Columbus Loop will begin sometime in 1980 or '81. Additional branches are scheduled for the Bayville area, Indian Lakes, Kings Grant and Princess Anne Courthouse.

Unlike many cities, Virginia Beach has no "main" library as such. "When you're dealing with a 260-square-mile area, a main library isn't very practical," Mrs. Sims states. "A system of very strong branch libraries seems more appropriate for an area this large."

She cites regional cooperation among Tidewater libraries as another priority of the system. "The simple truth is, nobody can have everything. We must share resources."

Tidewater libraries are achieving this through related inter-library loan codes. A recent state study also investigated the possibility of a networking system that would hook up the four city library systems. This automated circulation would enable a person at any branch to locate a book anywhere in Tidewater.

Mrs. Sims, who has been with the Virginia Beach Libraries for seven years, says we are in the midst of an "information boom" that makes library work an exciting field.

After earning a B.A. degree in English and a master's in library science, she worked for two-and-a-half years in the arts and music department of the Richmond Public Library.

"Having spent a lot of time writing papers in the library while in school, I became aware of their workings, I was impressed that libraries housed so much information," she recalls.

Mrs. Sims was branch librarian at Bayside for three years, then became the assistant director of the Beach system. She has been the director for two years.

"Virginia Beach readers want books that help them function in their daily lives," she says, "like books on how to write a resume, or information on careers."

"There are trends at the different branches. Arts and antiques are popular at the Oceanfront branch. Kempsville readers want 'how to do it' books, like how to build a fireplace,"

Merrick sets budget goals for Beach

Virginia Beach City Councilman Donald S. Merrick thinks so.

An executive of the Ford Company for 30 years, Merrick told council Monday afternoon that methods used by Ford to stay within a set budget can be used by the city of Virginia Beach.

As head of 21 Ford assembly plants from 1964 to 1969 Merrick said that he was never told where to cut the budget but was given budget goals. He said he would never tell City Manager George L. Hanbury where to cut the budget but proceeded to set goals - five in all.

Councilman Merrick

Before listing the goals, Merrick presented his credentials. He said he majored in accounting and minored in engineering, served in the Army where his business know-how was used, and helped design a new accounting system for Ford. He was comptroller at a Ford assembly plant from 1951 and 1952 and later assisted the plant manager.

His objectives for Virginia Beach --

1. Next year's operating budget should not exceed this year's budget.

2. Departments should absorb the wage increases given in 1978-79 (Oct. 10 - Jan. 1) that must be funded in full for the 1978-80 budget - amounting to approximately $1 million.

3. Departments should absorb wage increases proposed in the 1979-80 budget (merit, cost of living, etc.) in their proposed budgets.

4. Departments should also absorb inflated costs of materials and supplies.

In this respect he suggested forming a committee of appropriate city employees to review the use of utilities (electricity, oil, gas, water, etc.). Industry achieved a 35

Council approves construction

Housing for elderly to increase in city

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Housing for the elderly, virtually non-existent in Virginia Beach until recently, will be increased by 269 units with construction of two projects approved by City Council Monday afternoon.

Developer C.G. Harris said, "Housing for the elderly has been a long time coming, but I'm happy to see it's here."

Councilman Donald S. Merrick added that he was "delighted we're finally breaking the bottleneck and getting these homes."

The Lutheran Synod of Virginia is sponsor for one of the new projects and the other has no church affiliation.

The two projects will bring to five the number of developments planned specifically for the elderly in Virginia Beach which have been approved for funding or expect to be funded by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Only one has been constructed to date, the Twin-Canal-in-Green Run constructed by Fralin and Waldron, Inc., the firm which plans to construct the other facility off Virginia Beach Boulevard in the Bayside Borough. The project contains 300 units.

HUD has approved $4.7 million for Russell House which will be constructed by the Catholic Church on the corner of First Colonial and Wolfensnare Roads in the Lynnhaven Borough.

Approval is also expected from HUD for Canterbury-Westminster Homes, sponsored by the Presbyterian and Episcopal churches off Shore Drive. The 15-story structure on a 15-acre site will have 390 units.

Harris Monday represented the S & C Company, owners of the property, applying for a change of zoning from B-2 Community-Business District to R-6 Residential District on a 3.217 acre parcel east of Malibu Drive, south of Alcott Road in the Lynnhaven Borough. Council approved the change which will permit the construction by the Lutheran Synod of a three-story building containing 107 units. He said that $3.6 million has been committed to the project by HUD and the Bush Company will develop it.

He said that while the existing zoning permits the construction of a high-rise facility, up to 75 feet, the structure will be under 35 feet permitted in an R-6 zone.

He said the land adjoins the city's Social Services Department, adding to the suitability of the site for this purpose.

Area residents opposed the petition Monday because of its proximity to the single-family homes on Alcott and Malibu Roads. The homes have 40-foot backyards abutting the home for the elder property. Harris said plans call for a 42-foot sideyard.

Council approved the rezoning and the conditional use permit for construction of the housing.

Council also approved the application of Fralin and Waldron, Inc. for a change of zoning from B-2 Community-Business District to A-4 Apartment District on a 4.5 acre parcel on the north side of Virginia Beach Boulevard, east of Davis Street, Bayside Borough.

The change in zoning was needed to permit the construction of a ten-story building which would contain 162 apartment units.

Attorney James Pickrell, representing the applicant, said that the developers are planning a $3,800,000 improvement and have applied for funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

If the home is not constructed, city attorney Dale Bimson said council can rezone the property to its present zoning.

Subsidized rentals will be available in both projects.

Weekend attractions in Virginia Beach

Interesting special events are happening every weekend at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center through March 24. On both Saturday and Sunday special activities and exhibits that will be of interest to all age groups have been planned. All events are free to the public and do not require a Virginia Beach Recreation Center identification card.

Some of the activities planned for the upcoming weekends include a variety of dance forms, the rock musical "Tommy", wheelchair basketball, "The Glass Menagerie", puppet shows and craft demonstrations.

Generations of Beach tourists served by Cavalier headwaiter

By PAM VANDEVEER
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

Riding horses and stables, a sunken garden, tea served on the terrace or by the pool - all are fond memories for Thomas Fentress, headwaiter at Virginia Beach's Cavalier Hotel.

Fentress, 67, began working at the Cavalier in 1929. Of course times have changed considerably and he has adapted. But a chat with this man, whose portrait today hangs at the entrance to the Cavalier's Sand Dollar Room, is good for a few good tales about tourism at the Beach over the years.

"Back in the '30's the Cavalier had horses and stables for people who stayed," Fentress recalls. "There was a beautiful sunken garden with all kinds of flowers and the guests would lounge around."

"Lunch was served from 12 to 2:30. Afterwards we would serve tea on the terrace or by the pool from 4 till 6. That died out around 1937, I guess."

"Of course everything was much more formal. It was full dress for dinner. We served three meals a day and everything was served on platters - even your bacon and eggs."

Fentress said World War II was responsible for many changes in customs at the hotel. The Navy actually took over the Cavalier during 1942-45.

The following years included the popular big band era and Fentress' eyes light up at the recollection.

"We had all the big name bands perform here, like Louis Armstrong and Glenn Miller. It was beautiful to work some nights just to hear those bands. I used to love Glenn Miller.

"But that's all gone with the wind now. You don't hear anything like that here today. Sometimes we have a few pieces upstairs in the summer on special occasions."

Harry Taylor was a popular entertainer at the hotel during the 50's. "He used to go to the Hunt Room and tell stories and jokes until 1 or 2 in the morning. He and his wife would stay at the hotel a month or more. He gave me one of his records before he left. I have it at home somewhere."

"Things were really jumping there in the '50's," Fentress grinned.

The 60's ushered in the large conventions and the hiring of waitresses. "Up until then we had a staff of all black waiters," he explained. You had to go through an apprenticeship and you couldn't go in that dining room unless you were right."

"During the 60's they would hold luau on the big lawn. That's when the waitresses started. They wore grass skirts and the men liked that," he smiled.

"Today the staff just isn't trained. Someone comes in off the street and learns the job at the customer's expense."

"Waiting on a table used to be taken as a profession. You had to know the fine points - the right silver, know what goes with what, know about wine."

"In the old days you served the different courses. The starter was maybe a shrimp cocktail, then came soup, then a fish course and finally the main course. People have forgotten about that kind of service."

The guest speakers and discussion leaders will be Rabbi David Novak of the Congregation Beth El in Norfolk, professor of philosophy with Old Dominion University and Doctor William Reingold, associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology with the Eastern Virginia School of Medicine and also Senior Attending Physician with DePaul Hospital and Medical Center.

The public is invited.

Snake show at VWC

A snake show featuring pythons and several poisonous and non-poisonous snakes and reptiles will be held at Virginia Wesleyan College's Science Center Auditorium Wednesday, Jan. 24, at 7:30 p.m. Although the program is free and open to the public, reservations are required and can be obtained by calling the college switchboard, 461-3232.

Jimmi Bonavita, a Virginia Beach reptile hunter, collector and exhibitor, will lecture and show a film and slides on the feeding, growth, development and evolution of reptiles. He will show several exotic and local snakes and other reptiles and demonstrate treatment of snake bites. After the program, Bonavita will be available for questions.

The program is being sponsored by the Virginia Wesleyan College student affiliate chapter of the American Chemical Society. Additional information can be obtained by calling Sue Jacobson, vice-president, at 424-3678.

Winter class registration

Looking for something constructive to do during these cold winter months? The Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation announces their winter class registration for senior citizens, adults, teens and youth, Jan. 23-27 at Pembroke Mall.

Registration will begin at 10 a.m. and close at 9 p.m. with the exception of Saturday Jan. 27, closing will be at 4 p.m. Registration for adult evening classes will begin at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 23 only.

A variety of classes are being offered in this winter session, with an activity for every age group. For information contact the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation, 4700 Recreation Drive or call 467-4884.

Rehearsing for the weekend's production of "Rhinoceros" at Virginia Wesleyan College are (from left) Kevin Carvey, Don Drake of Virginia Beach, Matt Franck, Eric Thronson and Pam Riley of Virginia Beach. The existential drama will be presented at 8 p.m. on Jan. 19 and 22 at Monumental Chapel. Reservations, available by calling 461-3232, are suggested. There is no admission charge.

"Rhinoceros" on stage at VWC

"Rhinoceros," Eugene Ionesco's existential drama, will be presented Friday, Jan. 19, and Monday, Jan. 22, at Virginia Wesleyan College's Monumental Chapel.

Play time each night is 8 o'clock and, although there is no admission charge, reservations are suggested. Reservations can be made by calling the college switchboard, 461-3232.

The three-act play takes place in a small town at the present time. In the first scene, Berenger, the unkempt and apathetic unheroic hero, and Jean, his fastidious and self-confident friend, are talking in the town square when a rhinoceros charges by. The townspeople are astounded and alarmed. Before long another gallops by. The civic alarm is noticeably less acute this time.

Shortly thereafter comes the revelation. The townspeople are turning into rhinoceroses.

Soon, everyone but Berenger has turned into a rhinoceros. He begins to feel the terrible stress of utter isolation. He tries to become a rhinoceros. Then, because he makes the conscious effort to succumb to "rhinocerositis," he fails. Or perhaps, because his courage reasserts itself, he declares at the final curtain that he will stand up against the creatures.

Ronald F. Stokes Jr. is directing and producing the play as his January term project. The junior theater/communications major from Norfolk played the lead in the theater department's fall production of "The Inspector General," and has directed several other plays at Virginia Wesleyan. He has acted and directed with the Norfolk Little Theater, and will be directing and producing "Streamers" during the spring semester.

Playing Berenger will be Matthew J. Franck who played the servant to Stokes' character in "The Inspector General." Franck, a junior political science major from Hockessin, Del., has appeared in several other college productions.

Debi Biggs, who will play Jean, is also a veteran of several college theater productions, including "The Inspector General." She is a senior English major from Woodbridge.

Dr. Patricia R. Sullivan, assistant professor of modern foreign languages, is serving as adviser and consultant to the production.

Ionesco, a Rumanian now living in France, wrote "Rhinoceros" in 1958, harking back to prewar Rumania when he had seen a seemingly normal populace succumbing to the mass hysteria of fascism.

By general agreement, Ionesco has been characterized as a writer for the Theater of the Absurd. Strongly influenced by existential thought, such writers accept the proposition that life is an absurdity.

Financial survey available

The city of Virginia Beach currently has available for public inspection a copy of the actual use report on general revenue sharing and anti-recession fiscal assistance funds and supporting data for the fiscal year July 1, 1977 to June 30, 1978.

The report may be reviewed at the city of Virginia Beach Finance Department, Princess Anne Municipal Center, administration building, room 219 during the hours of 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Beach resident named to conference committee

Mrs. Bernard G. Barrow from Virginia Beach has been named to the delegate selection committee planning the Governor's Conference on Library and Information Service. The conference will be held in Richmond March 29-31 and will focus on ways to improve Virginia's library and information services.

The committee will be responsible for reviewing hundreds of nominations and selecting 300 delegates to the Governor's Conference.

Mrs. Barrow is a freelance writer for local and regional publications.

She is also vice-president of Virginia Beach Friends of the Library.

ALONENESS

Have you ever traveled far away . . . from all that's near and dear . . . and felt an all-aloneness . . . though a million folks were near?

There are some who must have others . . . and cannot comprehend . . . this being with one's self alone . . . without a human friend.

This shows that they have little used . . . the solace found in prayer . . . the talking to their Maker . . . and the knowing He is there.

Yet God is all around them . . . as He has always been . . . but the doorway to the human heart . . . must open from within.

Virginia Beach police report

No welcome home

A 20-year-old Virginia Beach woman had an unpleasant welcome home recently. She arrived home with her boyfriend and was standing beside the car when her neighbor drove up and went into his house and came out with a rifle. He pointed it at the couple and said they had to move their car because it was in his driveway. The boyfriend said he hoped the suspect wasn't pointing the gun at him and the suspect went back into his house.

It's chilly now

A black ranch mink coat valued at $1440 and four other coats ranging from $150 to $300 in value were stolen from the coat rack at a popular Beach night spot sometime around midnight last Wednesday. The manager stated that apparently the coat checker had closed the coat room early and placed the stolen coats on the outside coat rack which was located in the main lobby.

Threatening harm

An angry mother threatened a 12-year-old Virginia Beach boy last week when she drove by some children at their school bus stop, nearly hitting the boy. She then said she was going to hit them all if they wouldn't leave her son alone.

Getting rich quick?

Westwood Hill Baptist Church in Virginia Beach reported recently that a man had approached the church, identifying himself as a member who had a sudden family emergency and required immediate relief in the form of some type of monetary assistance. A check was drawn up for $100 and given to the culprit who then departed by car. Payment was cancelled on the check due to suspicion of the man.

Further investigation reveals that at least one other church has been contacted by a man using the same name in an attempt to obtain money under false pretense. Calvary Baptist Church was also contacted by this same individual in an attempt to obtain money.

Contract awarded

Pittman Mechanical Contractors, Inc. has been awarded the contract for a Chiller-Central Heating Plant to increase the capacity of the Central Heating Plant at the Municipal Complex for $317,533, the low bid of six. Virginia Beach City Council approved the contract award Monday afternoon.

NOW IS THE TIME . . . TO CLEAN YOUR HEATING & AIR CONDITIONING SYSTEM

• SAVES FUEL & REDUCES HEATING COSTS

Fuel shortages and higher fuel costs have forced homeowners and businessmen to economize. A dirty heating and air conditioning system cannot operate efficiently. A thorough cleaning with PRINGLE POWER VAC will result in savings on fuel and fuel costs. It will also help to maintain the system in good operating condition.

• HEALTH PROTECTION

A fungus which thrives in furnaces and air conditioners has been found by doctors to be especially dangerous to allergy prone people. Accumulated house dust has also been identified by medical investigators as a highly potent cause of allergy. Removing dangerous fungus and dust from the heating and air conditioning system with the Pringle Power Vac can be an important health protection measure.

Tax, tax; spend, spend; and we let 'em

Last fall, before the November elections, there was much fanfare in Washington when President Carter signed the $18.7 billion tax-cut bill approved by Congress.

The general idea was the average American would get a tax break in 1979. Right? Wrong.

Actually, as most of us will learn when we receive our first paycheck this month, the tax bite in 1979 will be bigger than ever. Congress levied more than it lightened. Most wage earners will have more money withheld because of higher Social Security taxes and cost-of-living pay increases that pushed them into higher tax brackets.

During the last two years, the average factory worker's pay has increased 23 percent while his federal tax bill zoomed by 80 percent and his Social Security by 27 percent.

As of January 1, the maximum amount of salary taxed for Social Security went from $17,700 to $22,900, accounting for a tax of $1,403.77, or $332.92 more than last year. Annual increases scheduled to keep the Social Security system afloat will take the tax paid by each employer and employee to a stunning $3,045 by 1987, or about 14 percent of the nation's income.

Amazingly, the Social Security tax, which was only $60.14 and $374 as late as 1970, now exceeds the income tax paid by half the nation's wage earners.

What can be expected in the future?

If all taxpayers could get from Congress in an election year was a highly touted tax cut that, in fact, offered no net relief, is it realistic to look for anything better in an off-year like 1979?

Growth needed to bolster sagging productivity rate

We have worried, like many others, about the poor performance of our economy in the productivity index. Since 1970, annual gains in productivity — the amount of goods and services produced from a given input of labor and capital — have been only about half as large as in the previous two decades.

Why the slump? Why are other countries outgaining us in this important index? Does the slump indicate that American labor is losing its motivation?

The Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York has taken a look at the trend and found no evidence to support any sweeping indictment of today's labor force.

Productivity growth has not slowed significantly in manufacturing, communication, transportation, trade or services. The slump has come exclusively in construction, utilities and mining.

The causes, according to Morgan Guaranty: energy conservation efforts brought about by OPEC oil-price increases; the level of capital investment during the '70s; government regulations, especially those concerned with pollution control and worker health and safety, and dwindling outlays on research and development.

This analysis leads the New York bankers to some obvious recommendations. The federal government should take measures to encourage the growth of capital stock in the non-manufacturing industries which are lagging. It should go easy on imposing new regulations on these industries. And it should increase its support for basic research.

The "nuisance" barker

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

In response to the City Council's ruling on barking dogs: No doubt, this new ordinance will send some scurrying to their phones if they think the neighboring dog is about to bark. But I, for one, like to think this ordinance will curtail the activities of the "nuisance" barker.

This is a dog with a very distinctive way of barking because he's tied up against his will. He is bored or is trying to get the attention of his owner. Unfortunately for the surrounding neighbors, the "owner" is oblivious to all, and his sweet dreams continue on.

Any dog will bark when something, be it another animal or person, comes into view. But more often than not, he will cease once the item of interest has passed. Not so the "nuisance" barker. He whines, howls, cries and barks on through the night, all for the favor of his owner.

While we are all free to express our views, it is very apparent that the individuals who have labeled the "barking dog ordinance" as absurd have not been afforded the unfortunate experience of living next door to a "nuisance" barker.

Abortion controversy

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Abortion is a very controversial issue which stirs many deep emotions among religious leaders, physicians, lawyers and laymen. There is a large majority of people who disagree with the ending of the existence of a fetus, no matter how small and underdeveloped it might be. Many other people accept the fact that abortion is needed, along with contraception to control population growth.

Some argue for abortion when a woman's life or health is risked because of her pregnancy. Another argument for abortion is the fact that a child could be born mentally retarded or have a serious defect. Various people believe that a fetus is not a total human being and should not have the same rights humans do.

Arguments against abortion are based on the belief that an abortion is the unjustified killing of an unborn child. Individuals who oppose abortion believe human life begins when a sperm and an egg unite and become fertilized. Furthermore, they believe that terminating a living embryo or fetus is wrong.

A woman has the right to do what is best for her, since she does have control over her own body. The right is particularly stressed when certain uses of her body have deep and lasting effects upon the character of her life, personal, social and economic.

After researching both sides of the arguments for and against abortion, I came to the conclusion that I do not think it is right to have an abortion, and a tearing away of human life is needless waste of a precious human being. But, on the other hand, an individual should have the right to choose what is best for her. There are many extenuating circumstances women have to face.

Visa denied

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Typical of the peridy of our Red-loving State Department (and indeed the entire executive branch) is the denial of a visa (later reversed in court) to a top boxing contender from South Africa. The reason: alleged "white apartheid" because of an assault charge in his own country, of which the courts exonerated him.

At the same time, plans have been set for a nationwide tour with full honors for the head of state of the Chinese Communists, a regime which came to power through the slaughter of 60 million of their fellow countrymen.

How can this be? Simple. For the last 40 years our State Department has been under the virtual control of the Council on Foreign Relations, a private lobby for the imposition of Communistic world government. In their official journal, "Foreign Affairs," members have flatly stated that the sovereignty of individual nations (including our own) should be abolished. This would mean, among other things, that when accused of a crime, you could be tried and judged by non-Americans.

SPCA to open — officially

Although the new Virginia Beach Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was not due to open until Monday Jan. 13, animals started arriving the Thursday before.

In fact, the facility has not had its official opening yet. That's scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 26. The SPCA is located at the intersection of Oceana and General Booth Bvds. Father Bambrick of Star of the Sea Catholic Church will dedicate the building, and Vice Mayor Robert Cromwell Jr., also a SPCA board member, will cut the ribbon.

...Hours now are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The fee for dogs is $5 and for cats is $3.

...Persons attending Sunday's open house are asked to bring newspapers, dog food or white elephants.

Districts end freedom of choice

The last school segregation in Virginia Beach public schools will officially end July 1.

At Tuesday's School Board meeting, a desegregation plan, originally due in November, was submitted to and approved by the Board. Under the plan freedom of choice will end, and students will be assigned to schools according to non-racial geographical districts.

The three schools which had not been desegregated before are Seaboard and Seateck elementary schools and Union Kempsville High School. Seaboard will be renamed Princess Anne Elementary; Seateck will become Birdneck Road Elementary, and Union Kempsville will become the Virginia Beach Center for Effective Learning, a diagnosis and testing center.

Commission hears good news

The Virginia Beach Erosion Commission heard a report at its meeting Tuesday that the beach along the oceanfront is in excellent condition and that the wintry weather, including the storm earlier this week, has actually brought new material into the beach rather than taking away.

Because of this the commission agreed to table, at the recommendation of commission chairman E.H. Church, involvement in a proposed program of sand removal for replenishment purposes from the Ocean Park Area.

While the commission's consulting engineer Joseph McDonald did not recommend a go-ahead with the truck hauling of sand from that area, he did suggest that the commission ask the city to look into legalities and land rights concerning land removal from that area for future needs. But the commission decided against this at the present time, since there is reportedly enough sand and material for replenishment in the sand trap at Rudee Inlet to be used for some time to come. An estimate from McDonald is that material is now available for between five and ten years.

Big catches may raise standards

Fishermen striving for citations awarded annually by the Virginia Salt Water Sport Fishing Association for outstanding catches could be facing higher requirements this year.

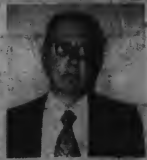

S. Claude Rogers Jr. of Virginia Beach, association director, tells the Virginia Beach Sun proposals have been made to raise the citation minimum requirements in several categories, including bluefish, tuna and blue marlin.

Rogers said minimum weight requirements for bluefish citations will likely be raised from the present 12 pounds to 15 pounds. The proposal is based on the increasing number of citations being awarded for bluefish, and the increased weight of the majority of catches.

Household Workers and Social Security

In most jobs, social security taxes are automatically deducted from an employee's paycheck. But this isn't always the case with household workers.

Household workers are people employed in or around someone else's home - for example, babysitters, maids, cooks, laundry workers, butlers, gardeners, chauffeurs, and people who do housecleaning or repair work.

Earnings of a household worker who is paid $50 or more by any one employer in a 3-month calendar quarter are covered by the social security law.

If you are a household worker, you should show your employer your social security card and tell her or him to deduct social security taxes from your wages. If you don't, you won't get social security credit for your work. And you need credit for a certain amount of work in order to get social security benefits.

If you work long enough under social security, both you and your dependents can get monthly cash benefits when you retire or if you become disabled. You will have Medicare protection at 65, or earlier if you become disabled and get disability checks for 2 years. And your family can get monthly survivors payments if you should die.

If you employ a household worker, it's your job to see that the social security taxes are paid and the worker's wages are properly reported.

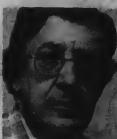

For each calendar quarter that you pay your employee cash wages of $50 or more, you must deduct social security taxes from all of the employee's wages. In 1979, the tax is 6.13 percent of the cash wages. You pay an equal amount as the employer.

Within one month after the end of a calendar quarter, you must send the taxes to the Internal Revenue Service with a report of total wages paid. The report should be made on IRS Form 942 (Employer's Quarterly Tax Return for Household Employees), which is available at any IRS office.

At the end of the year, you must complete IRS Form W-2 (Wage and Tax Statement). Give copies B and C of the W-2 to your household employee no later than January 31. Send copy A, along with Form W-3 (Transmittal of Income Tax Statements) to the Social Security Administration by February 28. You can get the SSA address for your area from IRS Circular E (Employer's Tax Guide) or by calling any social security office.

Not all household workers are covered by the social security law. Household work performed by a child under 21 for a parent, by a husband for his wife, or by a wife for her husband is not covered even though wages may be paid. For more information about social security of household workers, ask for a copy of the leaflet "Social security and your household employee" at any social security office. The Norfolk office is located at 3661 E. Va. Beach Blvd. The phone number is 441-6401.

TIDEWATER COMMUNITY COLLEGE-VA BEACH

Today College Counts

By Dr. William Bridges
Director of Continuing Education

Building Technology is an expanding program area for the Chesapeake Campus of Tidewater Community College under the new direction of Mr. Dave Smith, Assistant Professor in the Division of Math, Sciences, and Technology. This program area will provide training opportunities in acquiring new skills or in upgrading existing skills in the building trades and in construction management.

Currently the college offers courses in Residential and Commercial Building Management. Courses are designed to prepare individuals for supervisory and managerial positions in the residential and commercial construction industry and in related fields.

Occupational objectives include Engineering Aide, Project Manager, Construction Supervisor, Estimator, and/or Building Maintenance Supervisor.

The Building Technology curriculum includes plans to offer one-year (three quarters) certificate programs in Residential and Commercial Plumbing, Residential and Commercial Electrical Wiring, and in Carpentry.

Each of these certificate programs is designed to meet the growing demand of the construction industry for trained personnel and to upgrade the knowledge and skills of persons currently working in the field.

College plans for the future include certificates in Masonry and in Building Construction Inspection.

Mr. David F. Smith, Assistant Professor, will head the program area for the Chesapeake Campus of TCC. Smith received his A.T. degree in Architecture and Drafting from Temple University, the Bachelor of Science and Master of Science in Secondary Education from Old Dominion University before joining the TCC faculty. He currently serves as Commander, U.S. Naval Reserves.

Smith has taught industrial arts at First Colonial High School, Virginia Beach and has built two homes as owner-builder in Nags Head, N.C. His background and expertise brings new direction and organization to the TCC-Chesapeake building program.

For further information and materials, call Mr. Dave Smith or the Office of Continuing Education at 547-4515.

Notes from the shelter industry

Housing is a sound investment even in inflationary periods

By Lin J. Cooper

Director of Communications Tidewater Builders Association

The current mortgage rate for new home loans, as of this writing, is 9 1/4 percent for VA loans and 10 to 10 1/4 percent for conventional loans.

That's high. Everyone agrees on that.

But even in inflationary times there is more than one way of looking at the high cost of money if you're interested in buying a home.

Double digit interest has become a fact of life. When you charge on your credit card you're obligating yourself to an 18 percent annual interest rate. On a new car loan financed by the dealer, you'll pay between 14 and 16 percent annually. And when you consider the overall inflation rate is 8 percent annually and housing costs themselves are accelerating at a rate of 12 percent a year due to increased labor, materials, and land costs, you can sense that the cost of money is not really going up much faster than the cost of everything else.

Mortgage loans actually become less expensive because of inflation. With the 8 percent inflation rate and a 10 percent mortgage loan, the borrower is actually paying less than two percent interest in terms of real dollars. And because inflation is certain to continue, all borrowers will be paying off mortgage loans with cheaper dollars.

Another way of looking at the cost of buying a new home concerns tax advantages. New home buyers can deduct from their federal taxes the interest paid annually to the mortgage lender as well as real estate taxes paid to the city. The after-tax interest rate of today's 10 percent mortgage on a $50,000 home is actually only 5 percent. The tax deduction on a 30 year, $45,000 mortgage at 10 percent interest during a 12 month period is a hefty $4471. These federal, state and local deductions are particularly important for two-income families who have been pushed into higher tax brackets by inflation.

Another tax advantage comes when you sell your house. If you sell your old home and reinvest that money in a re-sale home within 18 months or a new home within 24 months, you can defer the capital gains tax on the profit from your old home, perhaps indefinitely if you continue to buy up. Or if you move more than once in any 18 month period due to job related purposes, which may often be the case if you are among the area's high military population, you can also defer any capital gains on the sale of your home. Also, persons over 55 years old are eligible for a one-time waiver of their capital gains tax on a sales profit up to $100,000.

As an investment housing has proved superior to many other investments. Stocks fluctuate up and down. Automobiles only depreciate in worth. Savings grow but not at the rate of present inflation which means while the dollar amount increases, the actual real buying power diminishes. Waiting another year while you save won't help you if the present inflation rate continues.

A home, on the other hand, appreciates in value at an average rate of $16.44 a day. You have the use of a home while you live in it, and what seems like a lot of money for monthly payments now will actually look quite small in a few years as your income increases and the share of it paid for housing declines.

A note for persons eligible for VA loans - the VA has increased its guarantee ceiling to $25,000 which means an eligible buyer can buy up to a $100,000 house with no money down. This includes veterans who have never used their eligibility or not used the current full amount. For instance, if you are a veteran and bought a house VA prior to December 1, 1974, you only used what was then the limit of $12,500. Today you can purchase up to a $50,000 house with no money down using the remaining half of your now current eligibility.

All of this is not to say that inflation is not a serious national problem. It is. Tidewater Builders Association as well as the homebuilders' associations across the country are urging government leaders to bring inflation under control. And at the same time, the industry is committed to finding ways to keep housing within the reach of the middle income American family.

If you'd like to learn how to buy a home, Tidewater Builders Association sponsors, as a public service activity, free, no-obligation classes. Selection, loan qualifications, types of financing, contracts and settlement costs are just some of the topics covered. Seats are available in the March 23 session. For a brochure, more information, or seat reservations, call 461-9140.

Taylor elected president of Westminster-Canterbury

R. Dawson Taylor of Virginia Beach, was elected President of Westminster-Canterbury of Hampton Roads, Inc. yesterday. Other officers elected for 1979 are: Walter J. Ford, Vice President; Robert A. Adriance, Secretary; C. Phillips Kraemer, Treasurer.

At the same time, Bishop C. Charles Vache and Dr. R. Clement Dickey, Jr., who had served during the past two years as President and Vice President respectively, were elected to the newly created positions of Chairman and Vice Chairman of the board.

Taylor is President of True Value Home Centers of Virginia Beach. Ford is a partner in the Hampton law firm of Hatchett and Ford. Adriance is a retired businessman and Kraemer is President of Heritage Bank and Trust. Vache is Bishop of the Diocese of Southern Virginia of the Episcopal Church and Dickey is Presbytery Executive of the Norfolk Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church. The two church bodies are sponsoring the development of the full-service retirement facility to be known as Westminster-Canterbury House. It is to be built in Virginia Beach to serve all of Tidewater.

Westminster-Canterbury reports that as of the end of 1978 it has reserved eighty of its planned 388 apartments. The non-profit corporation plans to begin construction on its $20 million building by late spring of 1979.

Tips on energy wise decorating

Make your home feel warmer this winter and reduce your heating costs: By Decorating!

The Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture recommends using the following guidelines:

Reposition your furniture to really take advantage of the heat a fireplace affords.

A folding screen is a good idea for blocking drafts from windows and doorways.

Try using colorful area rugs as wall hangings. The rich, woolly texture gives a feeling of warmth.

Use rich, warm colors on floors and walls as well as furniture.

If you scatter lamps around a room and position them carefully, you can get away with lower wattage bulbs because the lighting won't have to illuminate a large area.

Make or choose draperies in heavy fabric and estimate extra width for panels, to block drafts windows effectively.

Make seating area as comfortably close as possible. The more intimate it is, the warmer you'll be because of body heat.

Build into a room to create a cozier space. Layer window treatments for extra insulation. An idea is shades and tie-back curtains.

Use lots of accessories throughout a room to make it more personal and homey. Display them on shelves or in special cabinets.

For some areas, add lots of fabric; use it on walls, windows and furniture.

Leave an afghan about to tuck around you on a chilly afternoon. It's pleasing to the eye and very practical.

PETITION FOR CONDEMNATION

To: The Honorable Judges of the Court aforesaid:

Your petitioner, City of Virginia Beach, a municipal corporation of the Commonwealth of Virginia, files this petition in accordance with Section 2.01 of the Charter of the City of Virginia Beach, Title 15.1, Chapter 18, Article 7, Title 33.1, Chapter 1, Article 7, and Title 25, Chapter 1.1, of the Code of Virginia, 1950 as amended, and such general laws as are applicable for the purpose of condemning the hereinafter described property, and represents as follows:

1. The real property which is to be taken in this proceeding lies in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, and is shown on the plans for the project known as First Colonial Road, and is described as follows:

All that certain piece and parcel of land lying, being and situate in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, containing 0.030 acre of land, more or less, as shown on that certain plat entitled "Plat (Showing Property To Be Acquired By The City of Virginia Beach, Virginia From Winston M. Davis, et al, Dated 1-24-78, Scale: 1"=50' Prepared by Engineering Division, Department of Public Works, City of Virginia Beach, Virginia."

2. The plans above referred to are on file in the Real Estate Office, Department of Public Works, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23456. A copy of the plat of the property owned by the defendants which is affected by this proceeding is attached hereto marked "Exhibit A" and is prayed to be read as a part of this petition. The property taken in fee simple is outlined in RED on the plat aforesaid and is more particularly described in Paragraph 1.

3. The property to be taken is necessary for the construction, reconstruction, alteration, maintenance and repair of a public street or highway in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, known as First Colonial Road Project, the project number being #2-411. More specifically, this project is for the improvement of a section of said street or highway, and will include the right to construct, reconstruct, repair, improve, alter and maintain the same in accordance with the plans referred to above. The rights hereby acquired include the right to utilize the land in the future (1) for construction, reconstruction, alteration, improvement, repair and maintenance of said street or highway; (2) for all other street, highway and public municipal purposes, and (3) in accordance with all the rights and incidents normally acquired in the property as owner of the fee simple title thereof, with respect to the portion of said property acquired in fee simple.

4. Your petitioner has made a bona fide but ineffectual effort to acquire said property by purchase from the owner(s) thereof, but has been unable to do so because the parties have been unable to agree upon the purchase price thereof.

5. Your petitioner is of the opinion that the only persons who are entitled to an interest in the compensation to be ascertained in this proceeding are: Winston M. Davis and Jewell Davis, husband and wife, and Ida W. Davis, widow.

WHEREFORE, your petitioner respectfully prays to this Honorable Court in accordance with the provisions of Title 25, Chapter 1.1 of the Code of Virginia, 1950, as amended, that commissioners may be summoned and appointed to ascertain and report the value of the land taken and damages, if any, which may accrue to the remaining property of the owner(s) beyond the enhancement in value, if any, to such other property by reason of the taking and use; that the Court direct that all other steps be taken to carry out the intents of Title 25, Chapter 1.1 and Title 33.1, Chapter 1, Article 7, of the Code of Virginia, 1950 as amended, as may be necessary, and that the petitioner may have such other, further and general relief as the nature of its case may require.

percent reduction in cost during the last few years with such committees, he said.

He also suggested that the city buy only vehicles that "A" rates at 20 miles per gallon for city driving. Exceptions should be made for emergency vehicles only where higher speeds would require bigger and heavier vehicles for safety sake.

5. Departments may also have to absorb additional funds required to bring the city's balance available for contingencies up to five percent of the budget instead of three percent which it was last year. Merrick recommended the five percent rather than the three percent.

Merrick said that he would never recommend a budget that was not attainable and that he believed his five goals could be met.

City Manager George L. Hanbury said that he or craft books. Religious books seem to be more popular at the Windsor Woods branch.

"And of course everyone wants the best sellers," she adds.

A yearly book budget of about $200,000 allows the library system to purchase about 32,000 books. "That's about 8,500 titles," the director explains. "When we buy a best seller we have to get at least five copies."

About $30,000 is spent annually on magazine subscriptions. Mrs. Sims says the average subscription cost is $26, a 12.2 percent price increase over last year.

"Today's library is becoming more of a community information center," she concludes. "People of all ages need more and more information to run their lives."

"There's a lack of knowledge on how to use the library, but the staff is happy to help. Middle-aged people are often reluctant to ask for help because they think they should already know how to find something."

"They shouldn't feel badly though. In March or April we'll have our first computer output microfilm at all branches. They will do away with the card catalogue. The books at all city branches will be recorded on microfilm. With a whole new system, everyone will have to ask for help."

"That's one thing that has always struck me about librarians," she smiles. "They don't know everything, but they can sure show you how to find it!"

Although Fentress says he enjoys working in the new hotel building (located across the street from the old Cavalier), he liked the old setting and view.

"The old hotel was built in style, taste and comfort. Of course there used to be more land surrounding it. There was plenty of space - you'd look out and see one house here or there."

"We had cabanas on both sides of Atlantic Avenue that people would rent. We had a train line running through here. People would ride down from New York. (This was the place to be!)"

"In spite of all the changes through the years, Fentress is still happy working at the Cavalier. This year saw the addition of an oil portrait of himself at the entrance to the restaurant."

And even though the beach is "much too crowded" he still loves the city. He and his wife Clara Virginia live at the Beach. She runs a beauty shop that Fentress has owned "near 25 to 30 years."

"Things are just so fast now. I think I liked the old way," he said thoughtfully. "Service was really good. People have gotten a lot more casual. You see all kinds of people now - you just run into everybody!"

Public Hearing

WHEN: January 30, 1979 TIME: 7:00 P.M.

WHERE: Princess Anne High School
4400 Virginia Beach Boulevard Virginia Beach, Virginia
(Located 1/4 mile east of Pembroke Mall)

WHY:

In April, 1979, the City of Virginia Beach, through its Fifth Program Year Application, will apply for federal funds to carry out community development and housing activities for 1979-80. This application will include a comprehensive strategy for meeting the City's community development and housing needs over the next three (3) years. The Citizens Advisory Committee would like to hear comments from individual citizens, church groups, civic leagues, etc. on the following topic:

Proposed Activity Categories for the Fifth Program Year Application

On the basis of comments given at recent public hearings, the following program activity categories are proposed for the subject application:

- (1) Sewer and water line installation
- (2) Housing rehabilitation
- (3) Street improvement
- (4) Drainage improvement
- (5) Planning for additional target areas
- (6) Increased administrative support
- (7) Technical assistance - Community Development staff and target area residents

Citizen input is most essential for effectively fulfilling the obligation of the Community Development Block Grant Program to principally benefit low- and moderate-income persons in Virginia Beach.

If you cannot attend a public hearing, please submit your comments to Mr. Benjamin C. Moore, Director, Office of Community Development, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23460.

Naval airfield within city limits is one of the finest in country

Air Operations is the heart beat of a vital and dynamic Master Jet Base called Naval Air Station Oceana. Its pulse rate is one take-off or landing every two minutes, 11,000 times per month. There are over seven miles of runway. The latest equipment is utilized to serve the military air traffic of the East Coast. The only way to really appreciate Oceana's tremendous growth and importance, however, is to look back into the past.

Oceana was originally carved out of 328 acres of swampland in 1940 as an auxiliary airfield. Wartime growth pushed its status to Naval Auxiliary Air Station in 1943 and by war's end the number of men and aircraft aboard had tripled.

In 1952 Oceana was designated as Naval Air Station and the Master Jet Base concept was taking shape. By 1954 Oceana was an all-weather air station, and by 1957 it was officially designated a Master Jet Base.

The longest runways in Tidewater and its location within the city limits of Virginia Beach, near the warming currents of the Atlantic Gulf Stream, enable Oceana to operate when other East Coast fields cannot.

Over the past 35 years Oceana has grown to more than 16 times its original size so that today it is a complex of over 5,000 acres. It is now "home" for about 9,000 personnel and some 11,000 of their dependents.

With the introduction of such high performance complex jets as the A-4 Skyhawk, the F-4 Phantom, the A-6 Intruder, the F-14 Tomcat, and the F-5E Tiger II, Oceana has become the home of the world's most advanced naval aircraft. In addition to these, Oceana has a very fine Search and Rescue (SAR) unit which flies the H-46 Sea Knight and provides outstanding rescue service to both military and civilian communities.

Four squadrons for training aircrews and maintenance personnel are permanently stationed at NAS Oceana. Attack Squadron Forty Two (VA-42) is the A-6 Intruder training unit, Fighter Squadron Forty Three (VF-43) performs both instrument and Air Combat Maneuvering training, Fighter Squadron One Zero One (VF-101) conducts F-14 Tomcat training, and Fighter Squadron One Seven One (VF-171) trains F-4 Phantom pilots. Oceana's Naval Air Maintenance Training Detachment is also a training unit, training highly qualified maintenance technicians for A-4 Skyhawk, A-6 Intruder, F-4 Phantom II and F-14 Tomcat squadrons.

The home of 22 of the Navy's finest attack and fighter squadrons, this excitingly busy and extremely important Naval Air Station is proud of its important role in our nation's defense.

PIL GRIM'S JOURNEY

Communication is an important ingredient of our society and world. Communications systems have become very sophisticated to the point of turning our planet into a global village. It may be, however, that very little communication is taking place among some families. Failure to communicate automatically means a breakdown in relationships.

Communication involves a willingness to be honest. There is no room in family life for hidden agendas. "Lay all cards on the table" is a saying that very well applies to interpersonal relationships. Until a couple or a family get to the place where they will be honest with one another very little growth will happen.

Communication involves the presence of conflict. Let me share with you some principles of communication and conflict.

1. When two people marry, they vow to care for and take care of one another. And caring involves intimacy. Two persons cannot live at the same address without confronting each other.

2. Conflict can be very healthy and redemptive within a marriage and family if hostility is managed responsibly. This has to do with the way we handle our tempers. You cannot make it through marriage without rocking the boat. All machinery needs oiling every now and then!

3. Conflict can be an expression of care. Two people never really get to know one another without getting into the ring on occasion. Two people who say they have never had a fight are either lying or haven't gotten to know one another.

4. Communication and conflict go hand-in-hand. The right use of conflict can help us to communicate real needs and concerns to our marriage partner.

5. Communication involves four important ingredients. One is listening. Oftentimes we don't hear the other person because we are not really listening. And sometimes we don't want to listen because hearing demands a response.

A second aspect of communication is revelation. Many people are afraid to reveal themselves for fear of being rejected. Getting to know our marriage partner and our children is a rewarding adventure! A third and fourth ingredient of communication is that of understanding and forgiveness.

Here are three ways to handle a conflict. One is to talk about what's bothering you. Don't assume that your marriage partner can read your mind. Talk out your feelings and hurts. A second tool for dealing with conflict is that of timing. Don't wait a week to tell your spouse or your child that you are upset with them. That isn't fair! Pouting tends to make the other person suffer. A third ingredient is to both give and accept helpful criticism. Never criticize without affirming your love and concern for your spouse or child.

If you must fight, fight with these things in mind! God bless your marriage and family life.

Background on business

For the good of all Americans the problem of high unemployment among black teenagers should be resolved; recent figures show an unemployment rate of 37 percent among black youth.

Fortunately, an increasing number of concerned businessmen are beginning to search for - and find - ways that the private sector can help alleviate the problem. They are urging industry to make a major effort to train and hire black youth.

One successful, combined work-study program is the Joint Urban Manpower Program (JUMP). Sponsored by a coalition of engineering and architectural professional societies such as the American Society of Civil Engineers, the program offers technical training in the design professions. Although small in scope, the 10-year old program has been so effective that it could be a forerunner for similar programs in other industries.

JUMP provides skills training in drafting and actual on-the-job, paid work experience in addition to remedial education.

After an intensive orientation, the trainees learn skills and academic subjects in the classroom during half of their day. The second half of the day is spent on the job. Initially, the students just apply what they have learned in class to the work situation, but supervisors are trained to guide the trainees into productive work as soon as they can handle it.

Intensive personal and career counseling is a vital constituent of the program. Skilled counselors provide the trainees assistance with personal and work problems in individual and group sessions. They also work closely with employers and job supervisors to iron out any problems that arise.

Study Insurance policies on your own terms

Shopping for the best insurance for you may mean examining several policies point-by-point ... a time-consuming process. Many people find that the best way to find out what insurance companies offer is to look at written information they get by mail or in printed ads. This way, all the sales messages can be read and re-read. A decision can be made when convenient. Everything you need to know is there in printed form. For two-thirds of American households, according to insurance industry statistics, this may be the only opportunity offered them to obtain much-needed insurance protection. And your household might be one of them.

Studying insurance offers by mail or through newspaper or broadcast ads is a quick way to compare the offers of several companies at once. Many reputable companies sell their policies by mail, and will send information and even a policy for you to examine at your leisure, in your own home, with no obligation. You then make your selection based on what each company sets down in writing, not on what you might remember hearing.

Each company's literature explains in clear, simple language what its policies cover — or don't cover. All the information must comply with state regulations. Once you're satisfied with the policy you order by mail, you continue paying premiums by mail. Claims and benefit checks are sent through the mails, just as many other insurance policy transactions are handled.

Policies sold by mail come under the same state and federal regulations as other policies. In addition, the Direct Marketing Insurance Council (DMIC), a group of insurance companies that sell by mail, was established to support the highest standards of advertising and promotion practices.

Companies offer most types of insurance by mail — life, health, auto, and homeowner — to those who qualify. Some policies are designed to supplement insurance you already have, such as group health insurance or Medicare, that may not pay hospital expenses in full. Other policies sold by mail are meant to stand alone.

Many people are able to purchase insurance only by mail. Older people, according to one nationwide study, are less likely than younger people to be contacted by insurance salesmen. Instead, many of these people buy their insurance by mail.

When looking at the sales information or policy itself, be sure you understand:

(1) What's covered?

(2) What's not covered?

(3) Does the policy fill my needs?

(4) Can I afford the premium?

If you're not sure what the policy covers, you should call or write the company for an explanation. The answers you get could help you decide how helpful the company will be overall.

Gatlin's injury deals crucial blow to Lady Patriots

By MIKE D'ORSO
Sun Sports Writer

First Colonial's Lady Patriots basketball team is currently sitting at the top of the heap in the Beach District, and to no one's surprise, the primary force behind the Patriots' success is Jimi Gatlin.

Last Tuesday night, Coach Janet Rowlands' Patriots hosted Norview, and after some early difficulty, stormed past the Pilots to build a 40-18 cushion at the end of the third period, thanks largely to Gatlin's control of the backboards, her crisp passing, and her 18 points.

At the outset of the final quarter, the tall center crumpled to the floor, clutching her knee. After several tense moments, she rose and hobbled to the bench, where she watched her teammates resist a Norview surge which closed the final gap to ten points (50-40).

Gatlin's absence obviously hurt. The Patriots are a cohesive unit when she is in the game, which is almost always. The combination of outside quickness in guard Brigitte Comer and Lolo Lewis' strong wing play, built around Gatlin's numerous abilities in the pivot, give First Colonial the ideal blend of a powerhouse team. Without Gatlin, the mixture falls apart.

Her talents are no surprise to anyone who follows Beach District basketball. The solid senior has showcased her skills for the Patriots for three years, and sported a 24.6 scoring, 15.4 rebound average entering the Norview contest. Add to these figures a 61 percent field goal average and almost five blocked shots a game, and it is easy to see her value to First Colonial.

But what is this young woman, obviously the dominant force in area girls' basketball, like?

With her 6'2" frame stretched out in her coach's office chair, her uniform still on, and an ice pack the size of a bowling ball strapped to her injured knee, Gatlin, who has lived in Virginia Beach all her life, talked about her roots.

"Everybody in my family plays basketball. My mother. My father. My mother played for Princess Anne, and my father played for Union Kempsville.

"I started playing on the playgrounds when I was in seventh grade. Always played with the boys. There weren't any girls around."

Watching Gatlin in action, it is immediately clear that this is no clumsy goliath who merely uses a size advantage to dominate smaller players. She moves with a purpose, is constantly in solid rebounding position, fires sharp outlet passes to launch her team's fast break, anchors the Patriot zone defense, and is not too slow or afraid to dive for a loose ball.

And she can shoot.

"I never used to like to shoot. Never felt like I could shoot. But I went to the playgrounds and worked. My father and Greg worked with me."

Gregory Gatlin is Jimi's sixteen-year old brother, and he knows something about shooting. He will be traveling to Maryland to represent Virginia Beach in the national "Hot Shot" competition, basketball's answer to "Punt, Pass, & Kick."

Can Gatlin beat her brother on the court?

"He wins...sometimes," she grins. "He's a good outside shooter."

To gain some seasoning and to have the experience of going head-to-head with some of the best women high school players in the East, Gatlin traveled to the Pocono Mountains last summer to attend the Cathy Rush Basketball Camp.

Rush is the head coach of Immaculata College's women's basketball team, a perennial national power.

Of her week at the mountain camp, Gatlin noted, "Everybody's an all-star there. It gives a wide variety of good players. At first, I wasn't so good, but it was alright after that. I did alright."

A coach at the camp gave a more definite evaluation of Gatlin's skills.

"A super improved player — a definite Division I College player. If she keeps working."

There is little doubt that Jimi Gatlin will keep working. She loves sports — all sports.

"When I first started to get into sports, I played with the boys. Soccer, softball, running track, basketball."

Basketball is not Gatlin's only activity at First Colonial. "I pitched for First Colonial's softball team. I had a couple of no-hitters. We did pretty good."

She also competes for the Patriots in track, "Long jump, shot, hurdles."

Track and softball are both spring sports, so how can she handle two sports at the same time?

"They usually don't get in each other's way. But I remember one afternoon, going from a track meet at Kellam to a softball game at Kempsville and having to change into my softball jersey from my track shirt."

Okay, Gatlin was busy that day. But the important question is, did First Colonial win both contests?

"We sure did," she says with an impish smile.

Gatlin shows the same calmness and composure in conversation that she does on the court. She is relaxed yet deliberate, she thinks before she speaks, and she is very earnest.

In considering her college future, Gatlin gives further evidence of her maturity. She doesn't want to go to a school that concentrates its program on the veteran players. She wants to strengthen her game.

"I won't mind sitting on the bench. The first year is the hardest year and I've got a lot of things to learn."

Basketball learning isn't the only kind of education she seeks. She is a solid student and points to marketing as a definite area of interest in college.

Clearly a young woman with a sense of direction, Gatlin displays an impressive amount of maturity and poise — Cool.

"When Jimi keeps her cool, the others keep their cool," notes Coach Rowlands. "It irritates the opponents when they can't get her mad enough to lose her head."

Where did this poise come from?

"I learned the hard way. When I was in junior high, I didn't have any control."

Control is the name of Gatlin's game now, both on and off the court. And obviously, it is something she has worked at.

As a marked player, Gatlin is getting more than her share of elbows and shoves. Other teams are blocking the smooth center when she tries to move, often illegally. "I've had that done to me so many times. I'll be hot, but I won't show it." Cool.

Gatlin's injury against Norview was a fluke, a result of an awkward landing following a jump ball, but it was a crucial blow to the Patriots.

"They think it's a torn cartilage," said Rowlands after Gatlin's knee had been examined by physicians. "She looks pretty good on it right now, but we'll have to wait and see."

Waiting will not be easy for the Patriots.

Playing last Friday night without Gatlin for the first time this season, First Colonial tasted their initial defeat at the hands of Bayside's Marlins.

Obviously, the sooner Gatlin returns to the court, the sooner the force will once again be with the Patriots.

Beach District This Week

Kempsville shot down high-flying Cox last Friday night, and in the process, the Chiefs put themselves back into the Beach District picture, along with Princess Anne's Cavaliers, who are now tied for the League lead with Cox.

Leading the Chiefs' important 71-63 home triumph were Gary Freeman (17 points) and Mike Downs (23 points).

Freeman led the Chief charge with 12 first-half points, and Downs took over after intermission, notching 17 points.

Myron Goffigan, with 22 points, and Rich Davidson, with 17, led the Falcons with their inside-outside attack.

"We won this game on the practice court," noted Kempsville coach Bill Cochran, whose Chiefs will host Princess Anne in Friday night's highlight District matchup.

Beach sports club names winners

The Virginia Beach Sports Club has announced three more of their award winners who will receive awards at the club's 26th annual Jamboree on Monday, Jan. 29.

Selected as the High School Defensive Lineman of the year was Don Phillips of First Colonial High School. Don, a 6'1", 210 lb. senior, averaged 16 tackles per game over a three year period, and climaxed his senior year by being selected to the all state team as a defensive guard.

Selected as High School Back this year was Larmount Lawson, a 6'0", 185 lb. running back, also of First Colonial High. He is the all time First Colonial rusher with over 2600 yards, one gained over 1000 yards each of the past two years. He was selected on the All State 2nd team.

Selected as the outstanding athlete from Virginia Beach was Gene Bunn of V.P.I. In 1973 Gene was selected as the outstanding High School Football player in Virginia Beach while a junior at Kellam.

During his four years at V.P.I., he broke the school record for interceptions with 18. He was selected on the 2nd team all South and in this year's Blue Gray game he ended the victory for the Gray with a last minute interception. He also had a 63 yard punt return, which unfortunately was nullified on a penalty.

Old Donation Parkway, South Blvd. meet opposite fates at hearing

By PAM VANDEVER
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

Future plans for two controversial Virginia Beach roads met with quite different fates Thursday evening at an emotional public hearing held before the Virginia Beach Planning Commission.

Before a standing-room-only crowd the commission voted to keep Old Donation Parkway on the city's Master Street and Highway Plan, much to the dismay of angry residents and civic groups.

A proposed extension of South Boulevard, on the other hand, was unanimously voted to be stricken from the master plan.

Russ Dickens, representing United Citizens Against the Parkway, headed the presentations opposing the construction of Old Donation Parkway. He told the planning commission when the road first entered the planning stages in 1962 it was designed as a major east-west artery to the beach and was to be built through undeveloped land.

Since then, neighborhoods have become established along the route and the proposed road plan has been shortened to stretch only from First Colonial Road to Independence Blvd.

Individuals representing many area civic leagues spoke, listing disruption of established neighborhoods, lower property values, pollution of the Lynnhaven and tax burden to the citizens as reasons to abolish the plan altogether.

Following the speakers, William Cleaves of the planning commission made a motion to delete the parkway from the Master Street and Highway Plan, but to retain the right-of-way that the city has already acquired.

The motion was seconded but failed to pass, drawing loud boos from the audience.

A motion to keep the street on the plan then passed, sparking angry questions from the crowd such as "Don't you represent the people?"

Several commission members explained that there were no plans at all to actually build the road in the near future.

"We have to keep the option open, however," said Jane Purrington of the commission. "We have to look ahead to future traffic needs."

At some points it became difficult to hear the commission due to comments and questions being fired from those attending the hearing.

Mrs. Purrington then made a recommendation to remove funds programmed in the city's Capital Improvements Program for engineering and design work on the parkway.

"We don't want to see money spent on it until a final decision on whether or not to build it is made," she said. The recommendation carried. At that point a man in the audience jumped up and addressed the commission. "I think your actions are very questionable," he said angrily. "I have never heard anyone who is for this road. During the presentations you looked like you were up there relaxing with a decision already made."

Amidst the growing disorder in the room one woman finally rushed up to the podium and in a choking voice addressed the citizens.

"I'm a resident of Little Neck and I feel as strongly about this as you do, but I am embarrassed. If we don't treat the commission with respect how can we expect them to treat us with respect?"

Russ Dickens then stood up and suggested that all the Old Donation Parkway people leave the hearing at that point.

After several minutes order was regained in preparation to discuss South Blvd. The council chambers remained full in spite of the walk-out.

The plan to extend South Blvd. .59 miles through to Rosemont Road was opposed by most of the speakers before the commission.

Frederick Hodges of Windsor Woods was the principal speaker in opposition to the extension, who emphasized the dangers the road would present

Council approves coastal resources act

By LEE CASHILL

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Virginia Beach City Council has approved with exceptions an extensively amended Coastal Resources Management Act now before the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Conservation and Natural Resources.

Monday night a majority of six endorsed the act except for sections which appear to give the Commissioner of Marine Resources too much power over local decisions. Five others abstained because of insufficient time to study the amended bill. Two of the five, vice mayor J. Henry McCoy and Councilman George R. Ferrell had originally voted "no" but switched their votes to absentions to indicate they were not opposed to shorelands legislation but needed more time to study the proposals.

Mayor Patrick L. Standing, who finally voted to endorse the legislation, expressed some doubts. He said the bureaucracy which will be set up "will be astounding." He said that what Virginia Beach wanted was enabling legislation to permit the city to set up its own legislation. "This is more than enabling legislation," he said.

Access still poses problem for False Cape State Park

By LEE CASHILL

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Although the Commonwealth of Virginia acquired 2,120 acres at False Cape State Park for the enjoyment of its citizens, any access to the park apparently will meet resistance from some of these same citizens.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley told Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon that she has reservations about the development of any road which leads to the park. She cited the traffic problems through areas like Sandbridge and the possibility that approach roads leading to the park would stimulate construction detrimental to the agricultural industry.

As a result, she suggested deferring action on a resolution supporting Governor John Dalton's action in refusing to swap the park land containing 5.7 miles of oceanfront for 1.5 miles of oceanfront in the Back Bay Wildlife Refuge. She said she agreed the swap should be turned down but did not go along with the portion of the resolution which encourages the Commonwealth "to develop" the most acceptable park access so that the recreational area can be used to its utmost potential.

She said the resolution seemed to say, "Hurry up and do something." Mrs. Henley said she agreed with Ben Bolen, district engineer for the State Department of Parks, who suggested last week that the state proceed slowly in developing the resource. She said bike trails may be one way to Councilman John A. Baum said that he shared her concern but that a resolution had but so much strength anyway.

The state had originally planned to get to the park with a road over the refuge, but environmental agencies have ruled that out. The land swap with

'Jaycees help people become...' is theme for annual celebration

Virginia Beach Mayor Patrick Standing signed a declaration last Thursday recognizing Jan. 21-27 as Jaycee Week in Virginia Beach. On hand for the occasion were Terry Lewis, president of the Virginia Beach Jaycees; Mike Lagiglia, vice president; and Perry O'Keefe, public relations director.

The theme for this year's celebration is "Jaycees help people become..." Some Virginia Beach notables who are former Jaycees include Joe Canada, state senator; Bob Stanton, president of Goodman, Segar and Hogan; Andre Evans, commonwealth's attorney; Fletcher Bryant and Don Fentress of Bryant, Fentress and Kitchen; Mike Savides, president of Air-a-plane Corp.; Larry Sencilio of Larasan Realty; Better Homes and Gardens; and Bill Foster, senior vice president of Virginia National Bank.

Larry Sencilio recalled some of the benefits of being a Jaycee member.

"When I came into town some 25 years ago I didn't know a soul. I met Ray Adams who was quite active in the Jaycees. The group got me started on a social basis and instilled pride in the community and a desire to give to it.

"I still have very good friendships from years ago made through the Jaycees. The group gave me direction in business, taught me some things about leadership and made me and my wife feel at home."

Jaycees hold big hop for Easter Seals

It's time to get out your Disco Duds, because the Virginia Beach Jaycees and Jaycettes are celebrating the Fabulous Seventies with a Disco Dance-a-Thon for Easter Seals.

The hop will be held at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center in Kempville on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 9-10. Dancers will disco around the clock to the beat of great hits from the Fabulous Seventies starting at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 9th and continuing for 24 fun-packed hours.

The dance-a-thon will be held to raise money for the Easter Seal Center which provides assistance to the disabled and handicapped in the community at 3101 Magic Hollow Boulevard, Virginia Beach.

Local disc jockeys from the Virginia Disco Association will be on hand for 24 hours to present prizes, stack the wax, and encourage dancers to give that extra hour-of-effort for Easter Seals.

Col. Tony Kamp, regional director for the Easter Seal Society, has called upon dancers to raise $10,000 for Easter Seals. This achievement will bring Tidewater special recognition on the Easter Seal Telethon which will be broadcast nationally from Hollywood, March 24-25.

Virginia Beach happenings

Navy family service info

The next NAS Oceana Navy Family Service Information School will be held Feb. 14, 15, and 16 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Chapel of the Good Shepherd at NAS Oceana.

Formerly held under the name of Navy Wives Service Information School, the school is intended to provide useful everyday information for Navy and Marine Corps families. The curriculum includes talks by local experts on the Civilian Health and Medical Program for the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS), Navy Relief, pay and allowances, housing, Navy Exchange and Commissary Store benefits, Special Services programs, shipment of household goods and survivor benefits.

The school is designed to inform the Navy family of available services and benefits and to answer any questions they might have.

Free nursery service for the school is available. The deadline for free nursery reservations is Jan. 31.

For more information and reservations, call the NAS Oceana public affairs office at 425-3131 or 425-3132.

Historical society dinner meeting

The Historical Society of the Norfolk District, United Methodist Church will meet on Thursday, Jan. 25 for a 6:30 p.m. dinner meeting. Place of meeting is Lynnhaven United Methodist Church on Little Neck Road in Virginia Beach.

An interesting slide show on "The History of the Methodist Publishing House" will be presented by Marvin P. Rogers, regional manager of The Cokesbury Publishing House in Richmond.

Ministers and lay persons representing more than forty United Methodist Churches of the Norfolk District are invited.

Volunteers sought

The Virginia Society for the Prevention of Blindness is seeking volunteers in the Tidewater area to help screen preschool children for possible eye problems. Training classes will be held Jan. 29, 30 and 31 from 9 a.m. to noon at Calvin Presbyterian Church, 2901 E. Little Creek Road. For more information call 588-7491 or 583-9690.

Preparing for parenthood

The American Red Cross, Tidewater Chapter is offering a Preparation for Parenthood course for expectant couples. The course will be held at the Red Cross office in the United Way Family Center near Mt. Trashmore on eight consecutive Thursday evenings beginning Feb. 1, from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

There is no charge for the course which is taught by a Red Cross volunteer registered nurse, and covers pre-natal through post-partum care. For registration, call the Red Cross branch office in Virginia Beach at 499-2311.

Navy wives social

USS Saginaw wives club will have a social get together at the Meeting House on Little Creek Base Feb. 1st, at 7:30 p.m. For further information call 587-0564 or 486-8108.

Officers elected at St. Aidan's

Four new members were elected to serve three-year terms on the Vestry at the annual congregational meeting of St. Aidan's Episcopal Church, King's Grant. The new members are Col. Sergi L. Demchuk, Major L. Light III, Homer McCoy Jr., and RADM. Robert C. Munson.

At a special meeting the Vestry elected Peck, senior warden; Jordan, junior warden; Mrs. Robert G. Costello, register; and Gepp, treasurer.

Others presently serving on various terms on the Vestry are: Mrs. Max Baer, Mrs. Walter E. Beaman, Vincent G. Gepp, Robert T. Hagerman, William H. Jordan, David R. Miles, James L. Peck and Edwin Smith.

G.F. Rowe and Valerio Tullous in a scene from "Champagne Complex," now showing at the Tidewater Dinner Theatre.

"Champagne Complex" opens at dinner theatre

"Champagne Complex" is the current production at the Tidewater Dinner Theatre, 6270 Northampton Blvd. The show will run through Feb. 11.

Written by Leslie Stevens, "Champagne Complex" centers about a girl, played by Valerie Tullous, whose reaction to a couple of swigs of champagne at parties celebrating her engagement, is an uncontrollable compulsion to shed her clothes. Two glasses of the bubbly stuff and this otherwise exemplary girl of good family and upbringing begins tossing shoes, skirts and petticoats around with breathtaking zest.

Needless to say, such abandon is distressing to the lady's prudish finance, played by Glen VanMetre, and he calls in his uncle, a psychiatrist to analyze and cure this eccentric conduct.

G.F. Rowe as the psychiatrist, is a middle-aged libertine who annoys the heroin with the champagne complex by his jaunty habit of seeming to know it all. The knowing head-doctor says he knows why she has a take-em-off compulsion — a subconscious desire to shock her finance into breaking off their engagement because in her inmost heart she can't bear him.

Overwhelmed with the mental magician's acumen in understanding her, the erstwhile moulting heroin falls in love with him, involving the psychiatrist himself in her cure.

"Champagne Complex" is just as light as cotton candy, and effervescent as champagne. Believe it or not it is all good clean fun. For reservations call 461-7026.

DAR chapter visits Yorktown

The Lynnhaven Parish chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution met at the Yorktown Victory Center Jan. 13 for a tour of the museum and exhibits and to view the movie depicting the Battle of Yorktown. This was followed by luncheon with a birthday cake commemorating the chapter's third anniversary.

Welcomed as new member of the chapter was Mrs. John M. Behl.

Mrs. Joseph Brand, chairman, reported on plans for celebrating American History Month in Virginia Beach. Since 1956, American History Month has been sponsored each February by the National Society DAR to encourage a deeper understanding and appreciation of the history of our country.

Mrs. John M. Bell and Mrs. Robert D. McCrary were elected as alternate delegates to the 88th Continental Congress to be held at DAR Headquarters Washington, D.C. in April. Mrs. Brand and Mrs. William L. Hoeke were elected as alternates to the state conference which will be held in March at the Omni Hotel, Norfolk. Mrs. Eugene T. Connors, regent, is the delegate to both conferences.

Robinson Crusoe Day

Remember the story about Robinson Crusoe—the ship-wrecked sailor who spent 29 years on a deserted island?

That book, written by Daniel Defoe, is based on a true story of a sailor named Alexander Selkirk, who spent five years on an island in the Pacific Ocean, and who was finally found on Feb. 1, 1708.

As a result, Feb. 1 has been declared "Robinson Crusoe Day." It is a day to be adventurous, self-reliant, and self-sufficient. So why not visit your Virginia Beach Public Library and discover the adventure of reading a rousing novel or listening to some stirring music? You might even check out "Robinson Crusoe!"

Beach fisherman wins award

Virginia Anton is guest artist at Recreation Center Theatre

Virginia Anton will be the guest artist in the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation Performing Arts Unit's production of "The Glass Menagerie," which is scheduled to open Feb. 1 at 8 p.m. in the Recreation Center Theatre, 800 Monmouth Lane. The play will run through Feb. 11 with family matinees on Sunday, Feb. 4 and 11 at 3 p.m. All other performances are in the evening.

Miss Anton was last year's guest artist who performed the much acclaimed "The Belle of Amherst." As this year's guest artist, she will recreate the very demanding role of Amanda Wingfield, which was originally created by Laurette Taylor on Broadway. Miss Anton, who started her acting career at the Cleveland Playhouse, has had many years of experience in such varied roles as the mother in "Tobacco Road," Katherine in "Lion in Winter," Media in "Media" and Lady Macbeth in "Macbeth." She has spent several seasons with the Odessa Shakespeare Festival in Odessa, Texas. In addition to performing in the United States, she has worked in Canada and England.

The role of Tom Wingfield will be portrayed by Gary Powell, and Laura Wingfield by Linda Green. Sets and lights are designed by George Topper, and costumes by Peggie MacArthur. Tom Magee is the production's technical director and Henry deShields is the director.

"The Glass Menagerie," by Tennessee Williams, is for the most part autobiographical. The original production opened in New York at the Playhouse Theatre on March 31, 1945, to rave notices. Eddie Dowling was the producer of the production and also played the role of the son. The play is a memory play which deals with Williams' early family life in St. Louis.

The original delicate music, which was composed by Paul Bowles, will be used. This production of "The Glass Menagerie" will be presented as the author intended and more closely resembling the original New York production. Being a memory play, the material is delicate and tenuous, and has atmospheric touches and subtleties that have not been evident in later productions of the play presented in a straight realistic manner. Rather than ending on a note of despair, this production ends with the hope and promise of tomorrow, as Williams intended.

For reservations and more information, call 499-1281.

ACCESS

the department of the interior was considered because the refuge land, just south of Sandbridge, divides the undeveloped park south of the refuge from developed Sandbridge. The offer of the Department of the Interior, of 5.7 miles for 1.5 miles, was considered not in Virginia's best interest and council learned last week that the offer was turned down.

The resolution submitted Monday was intended to support the governor's action.

Council did eventually approve the resolution, deleting mention of developing access.

"Mrs. Henley said that although consideration has been given to limiting park visitors to 2500 a day and limiting it to day use, counting four persons to a car, 12,000 vehicle trips will be made each day plus the number of people above the 2500 limit who presumably will be turned away. Access through Sandbridge and Back Bay, considered as the best excess, is opposed by the people in Sandbridge. In fact, Mrs. Henley said she sees some drawbacks in all of the suggested corridors and fears agriculture will be reduced.

She said the resolution oversimplifies the problem.

Councilman J. Curtis Payne pointed out that the Access Study Committee is four years old. Nine corridors have been suggested and Mrs. Henley said she has difficulty with all nine.

She added that although the park is supposed to be for day use, camping was mentioned. Bolen said something about primitive camping.

After council endorsed the governor's stand, Councilman Clarence A. Holland said that he didn't think the state would allow such valuable land to lie fallow regardless of what action Virginia Beach took.

Beach sports club announces final award winners

The Virginia Beach sport club announced the final three of its award winners, who will receive awards at the club's 26th annual Jamboree to be held Jan. 29 at the Mariner Resort Inn.

The High School Coach of the Year for the first time in the club's history goes to a female coach - Miss Morgh Noyer of Bayside High. Miss Noyer, a graduate of Princess Anne High School, Longwood College, and the University of Tennessee, has been coaching and teaching at Bayside High since 1964.

She has coached the girls hockey team for 13 years compiling a record of 66 wins, 25 losses and 33 ties, winning numerous district championships during that period. As the girls' softball coach for the past two years she has compiled a 24-2 record winning the 1978 State Championship, in the first state championship tournament ever held for girls' softball. Morgh has also found time to be the cheerleader sponsor for 15 years.

She is a native of Portsmouth. For the first time in 26 years, the club has an athlete who will be awarded two trophies. Mark Woodhouse, an all state off tackle from Cox High is the High School Off-Linebacker of the Year. In addition Mark received the Dr. L. Curtis Hall Jr. Memorial award as the Scholar-Athlete of the Year.

Mark is an honor student with an A average. He is also noted as the No. 1 heavyweight wrestler in the Tidewater area.

Selected to receive the Special Director award is Dr. Ed Brickell, the Virginia Beach superintendent of schools. A native of Norfolk, he graduated from Oscar Smith High and was a Phi Beta Kappa at William and Mary, when he also received his masters and doctorate.

He coached baseball at Oscar Smith for seven years, and served as athletic director. He is credited with putting athletics on a paying basis at Oscar Smith.

Dr. Brickell came to Virginia Beach in 1966 as asst. supt. and moved up to superintendent in 1968.

He served on the executive committee of the Virginia High School League in 1970 and 1971, and had a large part in having the Virginia Beach High Schools becoming a separate District in the Eastern Region.

Virginia legislature 1979

The question of whether retail gasoline sales should be accomplished through the traditional station owners or through facilities owned and operated directly by the oil companies has presented one of the most difficult issues to face the Virginia legislature during its second week in session.

Until very recently, all gasoline retail sales were made through local small businessmen. The public, in Virginia Beach and elsewhere, has become accustomed to relying heavily on these citizens for the routine maintenance of their cars and for important emergency service, along the roads and elsewhere. Most of our gasoline station operators also perform many more sophisticated auto repair services.

During the last five years, there has been a marked decline in the number of stations being leased to local small businessmen, and a sharp increase in those facilities operated by the oil companies, both large and small.

The issue is not purely one of whether or not there should be more self-service facilities relative to the number of full service facilities. Many self service facilities are operated by local Virginia Beach people whose stations are leased from oil companies. However, there is a distinct tendency for more of the privately owned stations to be full service, and many of them provide self-service aisles at lower cost.

During the general assembly hearing, the oil companies argued that they could market their product more cheaply if they accomplish retail sales directly. However, there appeared to be ample evidence that whether or not the retail sales are made by the traditional dealer or the company itself had very little to do with the price to the consumer.

Gas prices are controlled by many factors, including many federal government regulations. Beyond this obvious problem, there seemed to be little logic as to actual prices charged by the oil companies for their product in various locations.

The house of delegates general laws committee has recommended favorably the legislation that would require that retail gasoline sales be accomplished through local dealers, for all new stations that go into operation after March 1, 1979.

It is hoped that this will bring more elements of competition into the marketplace and provide additional stations offering full service to the motoring public.

I would appreciate the benefit of the opinions of the people of Virginia Beach on this subject and all others that are before us.

Wage hike problems

Considering the price of groceries, it is hard to begrudge the 9.5 percent pay increase for the five-million Americans who earn the federally-mandated minimum wage. Under a 1977 act of Congress, the minimum is going from $2.65 to $2.90 an hour.

But the good news in the pay envelopes for those at the low end of the wage spectrum is something else for that fever-racked body known as the American economy.

For one thing, the size of the increase is an embarrassment to President Carter's anti-inflation program, with its seven percent guideline for wage increases. Not only will this increase add to the upward pressure on other wages, but its addition to the labor cost in producing goods and services will make it harder to keep prices within the 5.75 percent guideline.

Most discouraging of all is that increase in the minimum put a damper on the creation of new jobs for unskilled workers and can even force employers to drop those of marginal value from their payrolls. That is the group for which job limited, and Congress continues to reject the plausible idea of permitting teen-agers to be hired for less than the minimum for the sake of work experience.

According to one economist, Congress could have shaved 1.5 percent off the inflation rate and provided 900,000 additional jobs for young and minority workers by deferring the 1979 increase in the minimum wage. Congress declined, however, and the economy must now absorb this latest twist of incongruous government policy.

Residents say 'Save our neighborhoods'

This residential section of Highway 1700 in Virginia Beach is part of the route that would be taken with the construction of the controversial Old Dominion Parkway. Residents of the area voiced their opposition to the proposed road at a public hearing before the Virginia Beach Planning Commission last Thursday evening. As it now stands, the road remains on the Master Street and Highway Plan, although it has been a subject of debate for 17 years.

College Park gets award

Westinghouse Electric Corporation has named the new community of College Park as recipient of its highly selective Award of Excellence in construction.

...Candidates for the award are reviewed by a board of experts at Westinghouse and selected on the basis of planning, construction methods and aesthetic aims. ...the award has been presented to only four builders throughout the nation.

...College Park is a $120 million venture that will embrace a total of 2700 residential units, including one-family detached homes, condominium and rental townhouses and rental-type garden apartments, and a full complement of recreational and service facilities.

...College Park is one of two planned unit developments scheduled for construction in the area. The other development, Green Run, was given construction approval with restriction in March 1968. Construction has not reached the noticeable stage.

Teachers ask more and more

The starting salaries for first-year teachers in Tidewater will continue on the rise next fall; that is, if school boards and local education associations win over their respective city councils.

The starting salary in Virginia Beach, Chesapeake and Portsmouth this year is $6,000, but next year it has been proposed that all three jump to $6,500. In Norfolk, where the current starting salary is $5,800, the education association has recommended a $1,000 hike to $6,800.

The maximum recommended salary for Portsmouth teachers holding only a bachelor's degree is $9,500, reached in 16 steps. If Chesapeake the recommendation is for a maximum of $9,800 in 14 steps. In Virginia Beach the maximum for the holder of a bachelor's degree would be higher and reached in less steps. The recommendation calls for a maximum of $10,400 in 11 steps, and that represents a $920 increase over this year.

...The fate of any of the proposed hikes is still unknown. Last year in Norfolk a $6,000 minimum had been sought, but was not okayed by city council. City councils in Virginia Beach, Portsmouth and Chesapeake went along with starting salary raises as recommended.

Big dope haul found in raid

The arrest of two men and a woman on charges of illegal possession of narcotics has resulted in the confiscation of the largest haul of marijuana ever found in the city of Virginia Beach.

...a quantity of "nickel bags," which dope users purchase for $5 to $10 apiece, were discovered in the apartment.

...Further investigation led police to another section of the resort city where a two-pound "brick" of high grade, pure uncut marijuana was discovered with several pipes, used for smoking marijuana and a quantity of paper bags.

While investigation of the case is continuing and police said that further arrests are pending, indications are the "mother load" of marijuana was brought into Virginia Beach from New York City. Although the marijuana initially had a value of $250, investigators said that should it be sold in the marijuana market it would represent sales values at some $4,000.

False Cape State Park

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

It seems utterly ridiculous that state and federal governments would spend $8.3 million to buy land to establish a public park and then have the federal bureaucracy deny public access to it.

I support conservation, but I think it should be tempered with common sense. Somewhere down the line you have to consider pluses and minuses.

I can't believe a 40-foot right-of-way through the ocean side of Back Bay Wildlife Refuge would cause any great damage to wildlife. There are numerous precedents to the contrary. The park would be operational only in summer — probably only about five months a year. The main mission of the refuge is to provide haven for migratory wildfowl that winter here and return to their breeding grounds in Canada in early spring. The park land should enhance the mission of the wildlife refuge, hunting prohibited.

I support a land swap, provided that the access right-of-way land is traded for a parcel of park land bordering on Back Bay desirable for wildlife feeding.

A number of people were forced through condemnation and pressure to sell their land to the state to establish this park. If federal and state governments cannot reach agreement on an access route to open this park to the people, the former owners of this land should be given the option to repurchase their property and put it back on the tax rolls.

Rent control

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

I can't understand why a seven percent increase in wages is supposed to be enough for a working person while the owners of apartment buildings can increase your rent from 12.5 percent to 20 percent.

My husband and I have a one-bedroom apartment. In the two years we have been here our rent has gone from $198.50 to $270. The first year we were given a senior-citizen 10 percent discount. The second year they took away the discount and added another 10 percent, bring the rent to $240. In 1979 we got another 12.5 percent increase, making the rent $270.

What is needed is rent control to help senior citizens to live, not merely exist.

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

Your number's up

By Harvey J. Ridinger, Field Representative

Insured status needed for benefits

Before any benefits can be paid on a person's social security record, the worker must have enough credit for work covered by social security to be insured.

The amount of credit needed varies with the person's age and the kind of benefits involved. Basically, a person needs credit for one year of work for every four years since 1950 or, if later, after the year he or she reached age 21.

Using this rule, a person reaching 62 in 1979 would need credit for seven years of work covered by social security to be eligible for retirement benefits. A person having this much credit is said to be fully insured.

Eventually, 10 years of work under social security will be required for retirement benefits. This will be the case for people who reach 62 after 1990. No one will ever need credit for more than 10 years.

The situation is slightly different for survivors' benefits. For survivors' benefits to be paid on the record of a person born before 1930, the worker must have had credit for seven years of work under social security, assuming he or she dies in 1979.

Less credit is required in the case of a worker who dies at a younger age. The requirement ranges down to as little as 1½ years of work credit for workers who die at age 28 or younger.

Under a special rule, benefits can be paid to the children of a worker and their surviving parent if the worker had credit for one and a half years of work in the three years before death, regardless of his or her age.

For a person to be eligible for disability benefits, he or she must have credit for a certain amount of work just before becoming disabled in addition to being fully insured. The amount ranges up to five out of the 10 years before disability, depending upon a person's age.

Notes from the shelter industry

By LIN J. COOPER

Director of Communications, Tidewater Builders Association

City Manager George Hanbury recently expressed the belief that Virginia Beach's revenue growth as a result of an expanding economy and tax base will provide a seven to eight percent rise in city income in 1979-80 thus obviating the need to raise taxes.

Good news for everyone. Now look closely at the words he used.

An expanding economy and an expanding tax base. That means growth.

The word growth calls up different images in peoples' minds. There was a time when growth conjured up the happy image of automobiles rolling off the production lines, buildings shooting up, and factory smoke stacks puffing busily away. But with environmental considerations, consumer awareness, and shrinkage of land and resources, we've reached the point where we must examine and define the direction in which we're going.

But as we establish our needs and priorities we should keep in mind that economic vitality, represented by an expanding economy, has been the cornerstone of this country's progress. And the production of residential housing has been an important contributor to that economic vitality.

Take the building of 200 new homes. What does that mean to the economy of Virginia Beach? It means new jobs, new money and of course new homes to meet a continuing demand for housing in this area. For each dollar spent on home construction, an additional dollar is invested in the economy.

To construct 200 homes, a builder will spend $5 million for labor and materials. Over $3 million will go to purchase materials and $1.9 million to pay for labor. We can compute that 370 people will be employed for a full year in construction or a related industry. Those 370 workers will put their $1.9 million in earnings right back into Virginia Beach, buying cars, homes, groceries and the other goods and services people need.

Another $1.1 million will be spent for land development and improvements, such as sewer, and water lines and street improvements.

The new residents buying those 200 new homes will immediately begin pumping money into the economy. As part of the expanding tax base, those 200 new homeowners will be paying an average of $100,000 in real estate taxes a year to their cities.

In addition to the new tax dollars, the new resident — through the purchase price of his home — pays for 100 percent of the cost of streets, lights, curbs, sidewalks, and in many cases land dedicated for school sites and parks. He even carries his fair share of off-site improvements such as the extension of new water lines to older neighborhoods.

Housing's economic impact continues to expand. Two hundred new home owners can be expected to circulate $650,000 a year through their banking institutions for mortgage interest. Insurance companies will collect about $38,000 a year for property insurance on the new homes. A half million dollars more will be paid by builders and buyers to cover closing costs, other taxes and professional services.

The new home owners continue to feed the economy after their new homes are purchased. Two hundred new families can be expected to spend nearly three quarters of a million dollars for new appliances, furniture, draperies, garden materials and equipment, and other items to furnish their new homes.

If we examined housing's economic impact even more closely, we'd see an additional four and a half million dollars spent on a large assortment of goods and services, ranging from the jobs created in lumbermills and brick factories, to the costs of transporting products from factories to building sites.

When we add it all up, the addition of 200 homes to the Tidewater area will generate about 13.6 million dollars! When you use that ratio to compute the total impact of Virginia Beach's 4144 new homes, apartments and condominiums started in 1978, you can visualize the enormous economic impact new housing has.

New housing is a very real contributor to that expanding economy and tax base about which Hanbury spoke, and is helping keep everyone's taxes down.

New water heaters are more efficient, save on fuel

The hardest working appliance you own is your water heater. Because it's so dependable and has such a long useful life, it's often a case of "out of sight, out of mind." Once it's installed there's seldom any cost except for fuel.

Compare this with your automobile, which has a large initial cost, requires constant maintenance, burdens you with high insurance premiums and costs an arm and leg to run and park. At most you usually use your auto a couple of hours a day. Your water heater, on the other hand, serves you around the clock.

Water heater manufacturers have improved an already excellent product. The Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau reports that increased tank insulation helps heated water retain its heat longer, thus reducing "standby loss," the standby loss of heat from the tank.

In many gas models, improvements in the dip tube combat the buildup of excessively hot water at the top of the tank and enable you to improve the water draw efficiency at the bottom, saving fuel at the same time. A new thermostat control enables you to set temperatures from 120 to 160 degrees.

Home water heaters come in tank sizes from 30 to 120 gallons. The size you choose depends upon the size and age of your family members, whether you wash dishes by hand or machine, how often you do the laundry and how many baths you take. Charts for size selection are available from the Bureau.

Some new water heaters are available that get their energy from the sun. Many knowledgeable people believe that the first big inroads in the use of solar power will be via water heaters. Such installations come with "standby conventional fuels" for use during extended periods of cloudy days.

Classroom notes

Dean's list announced

Julia Fay, Natalie H. Ferrell and Deondra L. Waters of Virginia Beach are among 305 Atlantic Christian College students who earned places on the dean's list for academic achievement during the fall semester of the current academic year.

To earn places on the dean's list students must achieve at least a 3.20 (B-plus) grade average for the semester while carrying a minimum of 12 semester hours.

Gibson on achievement list

Jacqueline Marie Gibson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gibson of Virginia Beach, was named to the achievement list for the fall term at William Woods College in Fulton, Missouri. To qualify for this honor, a student must earn at least a 3.0 grade point average on a 4.0 grade scale.

Scholarship contest

The Lynnhaven Lions Club of Virginia Beach will sponsor its annual Bland Memorial Scholarship Contest Monday, Feb. 5th, 6:30 p.m. at the Shore Drive Restaurant.

Contestants will compete in two categories, vocal and instrumental. First prize scholarship money in each category is $50, with both second place winners receiving $25.

Those young people in junior and senior high schools are eligible and may enter by calling chairman Fred Soles at 486-5500 by Jan. 31.

ROTC scholarships awarded

Michael S. Battalio and Glenn C. Edwards, Old Dominion University seniors from Virginia Beach, have each been awarded a one year scholarship by the Army Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC), retroactive to the beginning of the 1978-79 academic year.

The scholarships provide full tuition, textbooks, and laboratory fees, plus a $1000 per month tax-free allowance for up to 10 months of the school year.

Applicants were screened by an interview board made up of ODU faculty members, ROTC staff members and senior ROTC cadets. The board's recommendations were then forwarded to the Army Training and Doctrine Command for final competition with students from colleges and universities throughout the U.S.

Scholarships criteria included student standing in academic and military science courses, and personal evaluations by the board members.

own legislation. "This is more than enabling legislation," he said.

Two portions of the bill deleted from the endorsement pertain to the overview of the Commissioner of Marine Resources. One section gives the commissioner authority to review decisions of local authorities. The other gives the local governing body of adjacent county, city or town the power to request the commissioner to review a decision of another locality based on the adverse effect of the decisions regionally.

Council, which had previously endorsed a Coastal Resources Management Act, considered it again Monday at the request of area legislators, presumably as a guide as to whether they should promote the legislation.

Standing said that his concern was that the bill will not be adopted. The city of Virginia Beach has considered adopting an ordinance to regulate coastal development but has been unsure of its authority to do so without enabling legislation. Standing said, "We've got a problem with the development of the coastline."

Councilman Reid Ervin, who supported the legislation, said that he thought the bill will never get out of committee. "The bill is essentially dead."

Jack Whitney, who has been working on coastal legislation for the Planning Department, said that the bill had been in the full Senate, but had been sent back to committee.

The bill has been approved by the federal government he said, as meeting federal environmental standards and provides for a committee to allocate federal funds so that 70 percent of the money is given directly to localities.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf, who has attended sessions of the Coastal Resources Management Commission which worked on the act, said that the bill, Senate Bill 403, is a "constitutional bill which will do much to protect the fragile areas" of Virginia Beach.

Councilman J. Curtis Payne was reluctant to give approval saying that he did not know the ramifications of some of the amendments.

Councilman Reid Ervin said that he hoped "we endorse the bill unanimously. Any endorsement, if it is not unanimous, will be less than effective."

"This is the very best that has come out," Mrs. Oberndorf said.

Councilman J. Henry McCoy said, "If you're looking for a unanimous vote, you're not going to get it tonight." McCoy said that he did not have time to read the bill thoroughly.

A deciding factor in the favorable vote, apparently was the success of the Wetlands Board. Local Shorelands Ordinances are provided for in the bill with local Shorelands Boards modeled along the lines of the Wetland Boards.

Councilman John A. Baum noted that, "We went through the same struggle on the Wetlands Board." The bill, he said, has been written to "create doubts." Directing his comments to council members unwilling to vote Monday, Baum said that the enabling act will be lost "while we're waiting for you to understand it."

Of 149 cases decided by the Virginia Beach Wetlands Board, only two were appealed, and one of these was appealed because of a technicality. Mrs. Oberndorf said that the Wetlands Boards has been a responsible board which has worked well.

Speaking of the need for some control of shoreland development, Baum said that "people will thumb their noses at Mother Nature and then expect us to pay the bill."

Whitney said that the Southeastern Virginia Planning District has approved the bill, also with exceptions regarding the power of the Marine Resources Commission. He also said that the amendments were designed to add flexibility to add a greater amount of local control. Many localities, he said, are not as fortunate as Virginia Beach in having local ordinances on Soil and Sedimentation Control and other resources legislation. The act will provide the common denominator for these communities to meet their needs, he said.

Standing was convinced that the bill as amended gives the Marine Resources Commission more authority.

Up until Standing cast the final vote, however, the outcome of the vote was questionable. As it was, Standing cast the sixth favorable and deciding vote. Others endorsing the bill were Councilwomen Oberndorf and Barbara Henley and Councilmen Donald Merrick, John A. Baum and Reid Ervin. Abstaining, to addition to McCoy and Ferrell, were Councilmen Clarence A. Holland, Payne and R.L. Riggs.

Among key provisions in the 27 page bill are:

Shorelands include all dunes, wetlands and fastlands (portions of the shorelands other than primary dunes and wetlands).

Building on secondary dunes will not be affected. A Coastal Resources Management Fund Distribution Advisory Committee shall be established to advise the Secretary of Commerce and Resources as to local financial needs and localities which participate in the program shall receive 70 percent of any funds made available from federal or state governments.

The committee shall consist of 17 members, one representative from the Virginia Marine Resources Commission and one representative from the State Water Control Board, three members of the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission (PDC), two members each from the North Neck PDC, the Middle Peninsula PDC, the Peninsula PDC Commission and the Accomack/Norhampton PDC, and one member each from the Northern Virginia PDC, the Richmond Regional PDC and TADCO PDC and the Crater PDC.

Shorelands is designated as the area 1,000 feet inland from the mean high water mark.

Localities have an option to adopt a shorelands boundary extending not less than 500 feet inland in lieu of the boundary defined in the bill.

Localities may adopt their own ordinances. Formerly adopted wetlands ordinances will be void after adoption of a shorelands ordinance.

A purpose of the bill is to insure that uses within the dunes are consistent with the preservation of primary dunes because of their natural functions in abating effects of coastal flooding, to abate shoreline erosion and to protect coastal wildlife and scenic, aesthetic and recreational values.

ROADS

stretching through an established neighborhood.

Edwin Lindsley, who had spoken out for the road earlier, told the commission he would like to see the extension, but if it was not to be built soon he would rather have it removed from the Master Street and Highway Plan.

He said waiting and not knowing definite construction plans was "sort of like being in purgatory." He explained that if the road was taken off the master plan he could go ahead and develop his property off Rosemont Rd., knowing that a road would definitely not be built.

Reverend Scott of Union Baptist Church, located on South Blvd., spoke out against the road, saying, "Don't uproot the oldest black church in the city." His light-hearted presentation drew quite a few chuckles from both the planning commission and the audience, a relief after the intense tension that had filled the room earlier.

William Cleaves made a motion to delete the road extension from the master plan and the planning commission voted unanimously in favor.

The South Blvd. delegation left the hearing amidst hugs and happy back-slapping over the decision.

The recommendations of the planning commission will now go to city council, who is responsible for making the final decision as to whether to keep either road on the Master Street and Highway Plan.

Shipwreck unites Virginia Beach and Moss, Norway

By F. MICHAEL LA ROSA
Special to the Virginia Beach Sun

"I am the Norwegian Lady," the bronze plaque at her feet declares.

"I stand here as my sister before me to wish all men of the sea a safe return home," the plaque continues. Dwarfed by the plush hotels lining Virginia Beach's oceanfront, the nine-foot statue gazes wistfully across the Atlantic to her twin in Moss, Norway.

She was a gift from the city of Moss to Virginia Beach in 1962, a symbol of international friendship and a bond between two distant cities already linked by an ancient tragedy.

With shoulders back and chin pointing into the wind, she seems more determined in her mission than her wooden sister who came to Virginia Beach 87 years ago by way of shipwreck.

Her stately pose and watchful gaze are inspirational to all who stop to read the simply worded message embedded in her concrete pedestal.

However, few who pass her can guess the history, tragedy and romance planted behind her smooth forehead and locked within her cool bronze heart.

The wreck of the Norwegian bark Dictator

Her story begins in the spring of 1891, when a chain of storms ripped across the east coast from New York to Florida, leaving behind a eulogy of ships and sailors lost to the angry sea.

As those remaining onboard the Norwegian bark Dictator saw no relief coming from shore and sought the places they thought safest on the quickly disintegrating ship, Captain Jorgen Jorgensen comforted his terrified wife and four-year-old son, and plotted to save them.

On the Virginia Beach shore, 350 yards from the helpless vessel, an angry, dazed crowd of tourists from a nearby hotel, and local fishermen argued futilely with United States Lifesaving Service Station Keeper Edward Drinkwater.

Concerned about the safety of his own men, Drinkwater refused to send either lifeboats or the "life car," an enclosed, iron-clad vessel transported from shore to ship by cables, into the raging surf.

(A Washington Investigation concerning this decision later forced Drinkwater to resign.)

Instead, the veteran keeper ordered his crew to fire a pair of canvas breeches attached to a life ring through the blinding rain to the ailing ship.

But the line-throwing gun was no match for 50 mph winds, and when a line was finally secured to the ship it became fouled, rendering the breeches buoy almost useless.

Only five of the 17 onboard the Dictator were saved by the breeches buoy.

The voyage of the Dictator to West Hartlepool, England seemed ill-fated from the time she left Pensacola, Florida on March 3 with a full cargo of yellow pine.

By March 19 she had encountered three severe storms, lost two of her lifeboats and was leaking badly.

Jorgensen, convinced now that "the sea is no place to raise a family," was anxious to deliver his cargo and turn his ship toward homeport in Moss, Norway, where his wife and son would stay behind.

But the Dictator's crew feared the battered wooden ship could not complete the journey to Hartlepool and refused to work unless Jorgensen changed course to seek repairs.

The 33-year-old captain turned his vessel around and headed for Hampton Roads, Virginia.

Unable to chart his position through a heavy blanket of clouds, Jorgensen ran his ship aground 22 miles south of Cape Charles on the morning of March 27.

"The vessel was heading up north when she struck," Jorgensen later told reporters. "I at once cut away my main mast to hold her head to the beach, but a strong southwest current slowed the vessel after she struck, and with the force of the wind slewed her head to the south."

"I made a signal of distress and in about half an hour the lifesaving crew appeared on the shore," the captain added. "I fully expected to see a boat sent to our relief, but instead saw several flashes trying to fire a line."

When the breeches buoy failed, Jorgensen ordered four men to take the Dictator's remaining lifeboat to shore. The men were to signal from the beach if they felt it safe to return the small boat for Jorgensen's family.

Keeper Drinkwater felt the surf was still too rough to send the boat back. The four sailors, dazed and exhausted from their rescue, failed to signal Jorgensen of Drinkwater's fatal decision.

"About dark the vessel began to break up,"

Jorgensen said. "Her stern was tore off and her mizzenmast fell by the board. It was useless to try and stay by her."

In a last effort to save his family Jorgensen put a life preserver on his wife, lashed his son to his chest and began to tie a line between them, assuring his wife they could float to shore on a bit of the ship's wreckage.

"Just at this time a tremendous sea swept me from the line, and the last I saw of my wife she was standing on the deck wringing her hands."

Thinking that his wife would follow, Jorgensen set out for shore.

"I had not gotten far when my little boy began to scream, and for fear that he might strangle I held my mouth tightly to his. In this way I almost reached the shore when a cruel wave tore the little one from my embrace and he was lost to me forever."

Jorgensen was washed semi-conscious to shore. He was the last to leave the Dictator alive.

The next morning the Dictator's hand-carved figurehead, an angelic Norwegian woman, was discovered among the Dictator's wreckage on a quiet Virginia Beach shore.

She was mounted on the beach at 16th Street, facing the Atlantic, as a tribute to the gallant sailors of the Dictator and a reminder of that stormy Good Friday, March 27, 1891.

The Norwegian Lady faces her identical twin in Moss, Norway from her pedestal at 25th Street and Oceanfront, Virginia Beach.

The Tale of the Norwegian Lady

Before she met her fate at the hands of Hurricane Barbara in 1953, the Dictator's Norwegian Lady watched the ocean from a concrete tower on the Virginia Beach shore, surrounded by legends of romance and tragedy.

One story related that broken hearted Captain Jorgensen never returned to the sea, but journeyed to Virginia Beach from his new home in Boston, Massachusetts for 30 years on the anniversary of the famous shipwreck.

There he placed flowers at the feet of the figurehead, then cast them into the sea.

But in 1953, her features marred by 62 years of weather and the final wrath of Hurricane Barbara, the Norwegian Lady was ordered removed from the shore by Virginia Beach city officials.

Despite a flurry of protests from Virginia Beach residents, she was wrapped in burlap and placed in the city garage "for safekeeping." Officials there say she was either lost or discarded by an employee who didn't know her historical value.

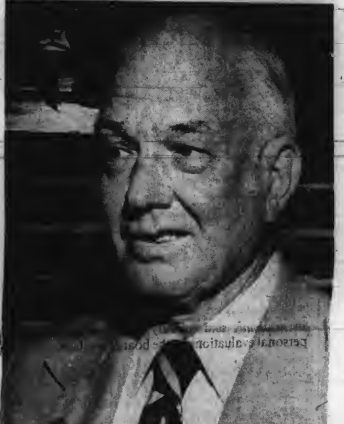

In 1960, long after the gallant wooden lady ended her lonely occupation of the beach, retired Air Force Colonel Thomas G. Baptist of Arlington, Virginia, became interested in restoring the figurehead through some Norwegian friends of mine.

"I had taken my daughters to see the original figurehead many times," Baptist recalled in a recent interview. "Once she was gone I would ride down the beach and think, 'What a pity they had to take her down'."

Baptist, who has a summer home in Virginia Beach, "We could have reproduced her anywhere," Baptist felt the city of Moss, the Dictator's homeport, should replace the figurehead.

PETITION FOR CONDEMNATION

To: The Honorable Judges of the Court aforesaid:

Your petitioner, City of Virginia Beach, a municipal corporation of the Commonwealth of Virginia, files this petition in accordance with Section 2.01 of the Charter of the City of Virginia Beach, Title 15.1, Chapter 18, Article 7, Title 33.1, Chapter 1, Article 7, of the Code of Virginia, 1950 as amended, and such general laws as are applicable for the purpose of condemning the hereinafter described property, and represents as follows:

1. The real property which is to be taken in this proceeding lies in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, and is shown on the plans for the project known as First Colonial Road, and is described as follows:

All that certain piece and parcel of land lying, being and situate in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, containing 0.030 acre of land, more or less, as shown on that certain plat entitled "Plat Showing Property To Be Acquired By The City of Virginia Beach, Virginia From Winston M. Davis, et al, Dated 1-24-78, Scale: 1" = 50' Prepared by Engineering Division, Department of Public Works, City of Virginia Beach, Virginia."

2. The plans above referred to are on file in the Real Estate Office, Department of Public Works, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23456. A copy of the plat of the property owned by the defendants which is affected by this proceeding is attached hereto marked "Exhibit A" and is prayed to be read as a part of this petition. The property taken in fee simple is outlined in RED on the plat aforesaid and is more particularly described in Paragraph 1.

3. The property to be taken is necessary for the construction, reconstruction, alteration, maintenance and repair of a public street or highway in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, known as First Colonial Road Project, the project number being #2-411. More specifically, this project is for the improvement of a section of said street or highway, and will include the right to construct, reconstruct, repair, improve, alter and maintain the same in accordance with the plans referred to above. The rights hereby acquired include the right to utilize the land in the future (1) for construction, reconstruction, alteration, improvement, repair and maintenance of said street or highway; (2) for all other street, highway and public municipal purposes; and (3) in accordance with all the rights and incidents normally acquired in the property as owner of the fee simple title thereof, with respect to the portion of said property acquired in fee simple.

4. Your petitioner has made a bona fide but ineffectual effort to acquire said property by purchase from the owner(s) thereof, but has been unable to do so because the parties have been unable to agree upon the purchase price thereof.

5. Your petitioner is of the opinion that the only persons who are entitled to an interest in the compensation to be ascertained in this proceeding are: Winston M. Davis and Jewell Davis, husband and wife, and Ida W. Davis, widow.

WHEREFORE, your petitioner respectfully prays to this Honorable Court in accordance with the provisions of Title 25, Chapter 1.1 of the Code of Virginia, 1950, as amended, that commissioners may be summoned and appointed to ascertain and report the value of the land taken and damages, if any, which may accrue to the owner(s) beyond the enhancement in value, if any, to such other property by reason of the taking and use; that the Court direct that all other steps be taken to carry out the intents of Title 25, Chapter 1.1 and Title 33.1, Chapter 1, Article 7, of the Code of Virginia, 1950 as amended, as may be necessary, and that the petitioner may have such other, further and general relief as the nature of its case may require.

said, remembering the events leading up to the statue's arrival in Virginia Beach. "But I knew it would have more meaning if the people of Moss replaced her."

Later that year Baptist related the tale of the Dictator and the Norwegian Lady to Captain O.P. Aakenes, then the naval attaché to the Norwegian Embassy in Washington.

Aakenes, immediately suggested Baptist write the story and promised to submit it to a Norwegian publication. Both men hoped for the support of Moss businessmen.

But Baptist delayed writing the story until a Virginia Beach/Norfolk newspaper reported that Moss had already agreed to replace the figurehead.

Baptist's story, "The Story of the Norwegian Lady," appeared in the September 1961 issue of The Norwegian Journal of Nautical Affairs, and its broadcast on radio by Norwegian celebrity Erik Bye, moved Moss shipbuilders and businessmen to quickly raise over $7,000 for the two Norwegian Ladies which now link the cities in historical friendship.

Ornulf Bast, one of Norway's leading sculptors, was commissioned to create the bronze statues, one of which arrived in Virginia Beach on September 22, 1962 under far more pleasant conditions than her wooden predecessor.

Moss officially became sister city of Virginia Beach in 1976 at the invitation of the Virginia Beach city council.

That year Baptist's Norwegian Lady Plaza Foundation, responsible for The Norwegian Lady International Park which has surrounded the statue since 1974, began its annual exchange of female high school students with Moss.

The Norwegian Lady Exchange Program, according to Baptist, "is perpetuated to foster mutual understanding and good relations between the cities of two distant countries," and is symbolic of the international friendship that surfaced with the wreckage of the ill-fated Dictator in 1891.

Naval Air Station Oceana selects sailor of the quarter

Yeoman Third Class (YN3) Gloria Addison from Aircraft Intermediate Maintenance Department (AIMD) was recently selected the Naval Air Station Oceana Sailor of the Quarter for January, February, and March 1979.

Petty Officer Addison was cited for her outstanding job performance as AIMD's departmental yeoman.

In addition to her diligence in the performance of military duties, YN3 Addison is engaged in several worthwhile after-hour pursuits, which also helped her in being considered for the Sailor of the Quarter title. She is working towards a bachelor of arts degree in human resources administration through St. Leo's College.

Every Thursday evening finds YN3 Addison attending an informal sewing circle and taking sewing lessons from wives of NAS Oceana-based sailors. The group meets in a mobile home court in Derby Run in Virginia Beach.

A native American, YN3 Addison was raised on a Navajo Indian reservation about 60 miles south of Phoenix, Arizona. In addition to the Navajo language and English, she also speaks Spanish.

Joining the Navy on Sept. 25, 1975 at Houston, Texas, the Sailor of the Quarter attended Naval Recruit Training (boot camp) at Orlando, Florida. She reported for duty as a seaman recruit in Air Operations here at Oceana on Dec. 27, 1975.

After a year at Air Ops, she was assigned to Oceana's Supply Department and in February, 1978, Petty Officer Addison went to work as AIMD's yeoman, where she's been employed ever since.

To achieve her award, YN3 Addison was chosen over eight other nominees in AIMD. Then she was selected over representatives from the various departments at Oceana. Concerning her selection, AIMD's yeoman remarked, "I was very happy." She mentioned that her husband, AO2 Mack T. Addison (also from AIMD), was NAS Oceana Sailor of the Quarter from April through June 1978.

When asked about whether or not she would make the Navy her career, the native American said, "I'd like to stay in if I could get into a program from which I could earn an officer's commission. One program that really captures my fancy is the Naval Enlisted Dietic Program. If I could get into that and successfully complete the required schooling, I'd come out being

"Team-wise" Chiefs roll with victory over Princess Anne

Virginia Beach Sun Sports Writer

Continuing their climb back to the top of the Beach District, Kempville's Chiefs stopped visiting Princess Anne Friday night, 85-75, and in doing so, the Chiefs tied the Cavaliers with a 4-2 District record. Cox leads at 5-1.

Avenge an earlier three-point loss to Princess Anne, Kempville displayed a balanced attack as they built up a large cushion in the first three quarters and held off a furious Cavalier charge in the game's final minutes.

"These kids want to win. They want to win team-wise," emphasized Kempville Coach Bill Cochran, and the figures on Friday's game bore him out as four Chiefs scored in double figures.

Kempville, recovering from some early season problems, seems to be jelling after knocking off Cox and Princess Anne in the last two games.

"We got everyone playing together now," stated Gary Freeman, who seems to be getting himself together, as he scored 17 points in Friday's win. "Everyone's been doing their job. Defense and offense."

Freeman is representative of the Chief's growing solidarity. Plagued by inconsistency earlier this season, Freeman has come on to key Kempville's last two victories.

"He's coming around," said Cochran. "He's back with a great attitude and he wants the team to do well." "We've got the winning attitude now," echoed Chief scoring leader Mike Downs.

It was Downs (22 points) who got things rolling for the Chiefs Friday night as he poured in his team's first seven points.

Princess Anne, adjusting to the loss of Brian Allard, who left the team for personal reasons, came out with a four-guard lineup, trying 5'10" Geno Carballo on the 6'3" Downs.

After Downs led the Chiefs to a 15-8 lead midway through the first quarter, Cavalier Coach Leo Anthony inserted Dave Moyer, who had done an effective job in the team's first meeting, for Carballo.

Although Downs did not score again in the period, his teammates, most notably Freddie Gilchrist (22 points), took turns at upping the Chief margin to a halftime spread of 44-33.

Kempville could do no wrong.

"Everybody played well, but Freddie played a heckuva ballgame," noted Cochran in praising his star guard who had been struggling this season.

"In the middle of the season, my game was falling off because I wasn't patient enough," said Gilchrist. "I had to go into this game and be patient."

Patience seems to be the key for the Chiefs, whose earlier loss to Princess Anne began a skid of four defeats in five games.

Rather than panic, Cochran's team regrouped and have now thrust themselves back into the thick of the District race.

The difference between this battle with the Cavaliers and the last one?

"We had only played two games before that and they'd played six," said Downs in reference to the first meeting with Princess Anne. "We had to play their game the first time. Tonight, they had to play ours."

Anthony's Cavaliers, outmanned on the backboards by the Chiefs, could not play Kempville's game.

Abandoning their unsuccessful man-to-man defense for a zone, the Cavaliers could only watch as Cliff Gilchrist (16 points), Freeman, and Freddie Gilchrist struck with medium-range jumpers to open a 16-point Kempville lead (62-46) after three quarters.

Only Thad Miles' (19 points) steady inside play and Marvin Williams' (24 points) consistent scoring kept Princess Anne in the gym as Kempville gripped a 17-point lead (71-54) with 4:25 left.

At this point, Anthony's team began turning yawns into yells with some help from the Chiefs.

In a span of 1:42, Princess Anne scored ten unanswered points, capped by Brad Pearman's (16 points) steal and layup, and Kempville was forced to stop the clock to talk things over.

"We could see our kids just looking at the clock," noted Cochran of his team's inability to respond to Princess Anne's frantic attack. "We let them back in the game. We were watching the clock." Not a safe thing to do against the quicksilver Cavaliers.

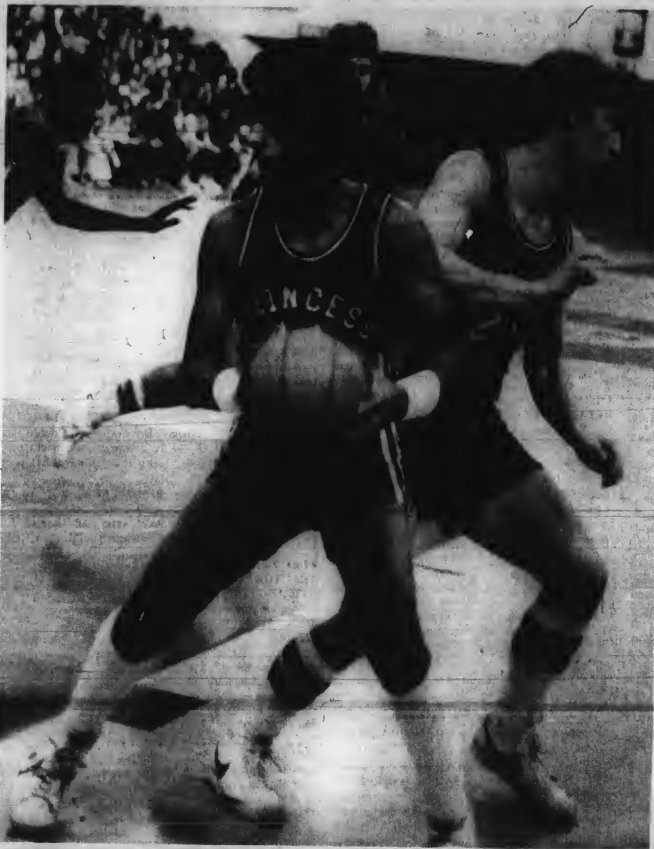

In their desperation, the Cavaliers were forced to foul the Chiefs, and Kempville played right into their hands, missing the front end of three bonus foul shots in one minute.

However, two of those misfires ended up in Downs' hands, and one of them was turned into a key score when Mike West (9 rebounds) dropped in a missed Downs shot to up the Chief lead to nine (73-64) with 2:21 left.

Princess Anne refused to wilt as Pearman coolly tossed in four scores in the next two minutes, the last cutting Kempville's lead to five (78-73) with 22 seconds to go.

At that point, Freeman broke through the Cavaliers' press to crush in a resounding dunk shot and Downs added his own slam at the buzzer to nail the lid on the Chief win.

With their troubles seemingly behind them, and a team concept as their rallying cry, the Chiefs are no longer examining themselves. They are looking ahead, and the others are looking at them.

Princess Anne's Marvin Williams grips a rebound as teammate Brad Pearman turns upcourt. Williams' 24 points were not enough as Kempville stopped the Cavaliers 85-75 Friday night.

Beach District This Week

By MIKE D'ORSO

As the Beach District teams enter the second half of regular season play, no clear favorite can be pinpointed.

Princess Anne shot off to a tremendous start, winning their first eight games, but the Cavaliers have tailed off since then, losing four of their last five, including two district setbacks.

On the other hand, Cox, after a slow start, has won eight of its last ten to take sole possession of the league's top spot.

That position is being challenged, however, by perhaps the hottest team at the Beach - Kempville. With back-to-back wins over Cox and Princess Anne, the Chiefs are pushing for the league leadership.

Not to be ignored are Bayside's Marlins, who have quietly strung together three league wins in a row, including a victory over Kempville, and are within range of the leaders.

Coach Johnny Dollar's young Marlins host Princess Anne Friday night in what should be this week's highlight District game.

Noona gives Beach audiences the music they love to hear

By PAM VANDEVER
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

Walter Noona takes delight in introducing all kinds of music to the public. As conductor of the Virginia Beach Pops Symphony, he regularly leads the orchestra through everything from classical to contemporary music, producing concerts that are attended by music lovers of all ages.

"There are thousands of people who will never go to a classical concert, but who would go to hear songs they recognize as being popular today," Noona states. "But I think some of these same people would like to be introduced to the classics."

He recalls taking over the symphony four years ago. "That first season we performed all classics and played for audiences of 200 to 250 people. Today we perform all kinds of music and we play to a full house."

Noona explains the success of his concert programs. "We always have three sections. The first is made up of very classic music. The second is light classic, or, if we have a guest artist, they play at that time."

"The third section is up-to-date music, whatever's right on top of the charts like 'Saturday Night Fever' or 'Star Wars.'"

"My philosophy is that an audience will endure through what they don't like to get to what they like," he smiles, adding, "Our last concert was sold out."

Next season the symphony will be known as the Virginia Pops Orchestra, due to the recent merger of Tidewater orchestras into the Virginia Orchestra Group. "I've wanted to see this happen for a long time, getting all the groups together," Noona says. "We should be able to get better funding and offer top quality programs."

"We are really trying to build up a good series of concerts and bring in top-notch nationally known artists like, say, Barry Manilow," Noona explains that under the new organization, season ticket subscribers will be able to attend concerts featuring either classic or pop artists.

Beach residents are very supportive of the arts Noona feels, and they are an attentive audience at concerts. "There are plenty of people attending concerts in Tidewater," he says, "It's getting bigger all the time." Looking to the future, he points out that the Virginia Beach Arts and Conference Center will be the home of the Virginia Pops Orchestra upon completion of construction.

A native of Norfolk, Noona says he always wanted to live in Virginia Beach, in the Birdneck Point area where he now resides with his wife Carol and their five children.

His musical background includes bachelor and master of music degrees received at the University of Illinois where he studied piano with Soulima Stravinsky. As a pianist he has appeared in solo recitals across the country and has performed as a guest soloist with orchestras in Chicago, New Orleans, North Carolina and Norfolk. He has also taught at the University of Illinois, Xavier University in New Orleans and Old Dominion University.

Today, when he's not conducting the symphony, directing the Virginia Beach Choral and St. Nicholas Schola or performing in his own Walter Noona Trio, he is teaching and lecturing.

Noona and his wife, Carol, also an accomplished pianist, have written the popular "Mainstreams in Music" series for piano students. In the books they have followed the same philosophy used in Noona's orchestral programming—acquaint the student with

"There are thousands of people who will never go to a classical concert, but who would go to hear songs they recognize as being popular today," says Walter Noona, conductor of the Virginia Beach Pops Symphony. As a result, each Beach concert features several "top of the charts" selections. When he's not conducting Noona performs as a pianist. He and his wife Carol often travel to lecture on piano teaching methods.

Planetarium studies UFO's

The Virginia Beach City Public Schools Planetarium will be "Of Things That Pass In the Night." This program deals with the UFO mystery and includes everything from an illustrated story of a man who said he was on board a UFO, to a photograph supposedly taken by one of the astronauts.

Photos of alleged UFO's will be shown while supposed facts about them are related. Scientific explanations are offered, and some hoaxes illustrated. Each person may draw his own conclusions about the matter.

Planetarium hours are Sunday, 7 to 8 p.m., Feb. 4, 11, 18, and 25; Tuesday, 7 to 8 p.m., Feb. 6, 13, 20, and 27.

The planetarium seats 120 people and is easily accessible from the 44 toll road—taking the Lynnhaven Exit (Exit 5) to the Lynnhaven Parkway and turning right at the first street—South Lynnhaven Road—to Plaza Junior High School, where the planetarium is located.

Telephone the main office at Plaza Junior High School, 486-1771, for reservations. Admission free.

National Association of Home Builders elects Napolitano

Against the background of the largest combined trade show in the world, Frederick J. Napolitano was elected vice-president/secretary of the National Association of Home Builders, Jan. 23, at NAHB's annual convention/exposition in Las Vegas, Nevada. The election assures Napolitano of the presidency of the 13,000 member trade association in 1982.

Napolitano, Chairman of the Board of Pembroke Realty & Insurance Agency, Inc., of Virginia Beach, was elected by the 1,250 member NAHB Board of Directors. The board also adopted policy resolutions on number of issues facing the housing industry.

Inflation was the key issue of Napolitano's campaign, believing "we can both curb inflation and have a viable economy which would mean lower interest rates and a stabilization of housing production," Napolitano called for a cut in government spending.

"The demand for housing still outstrips our ability to meet it. In order to fulfill the housing needs of the American people, we need a stable production schedule over a long period of time. We must stop inflation by cutting government spending and allowing the free enterprise system and the natural competitiveness of the marketplace to work."

Beach Arts and Conference Center takes shape

The unique design of Virginia Beach's $16 million Arts and Conference Center, scheduled for completion and occupancy in the spring of 1980, is beginning to take shape on a 20-acre site just seven blocks west of the city's three-mile Atlantic Ocean beachfront section that contains hotels and motels with over 7,000 first-class accommodations.

As of now, only the steel framework is silhouetted against the ocean sky. A series of ten barrel vaults, each one approximately 60 feet above ground at the high point of its curvature, will eventually grace the skyline.

Each barrel vault is 60 feet across and up to 240 feet in length. The ten parallel units rest on steel trusses parallel with the vaults. The trusses consist of a series of box units, each 8 feet deep and about 9 1/2 feet wide. The steel truss units are supported by 20-foot-high steel columns, two sets of which are located at each end.

Due to the unique design and construction, the structure offers a 375 x 215-foot exhibition hall that has a clear span of 170 feet between columns. The finished inside maximum height of the exhibition hall, made possible by the barrel vault design, is 56 feet. The center's overall dimensions are 215 x 670 feet.

In addition to the exhibition hall, the center features an auditorium with seating for 1,000, up to seven smaller individual meeting rooms, a gallery—or "Galleria"—as it will be called, lounges, an attractive garden court and entrance areas that provide spacious and easy ingress and egress.

Owned by the city of Virginia Beach, the new center's construction is proceeding close to schedule under the watchful eye of James L. Frantz, project manager, who said that steelwork for the building should be virtually complete by the first quarter of 1979.

Bethlehem Steel Corporation is supplying over 2,000 tons of structural shapes for the project.

By late October, the foundation work was basically complete in the Exhibition Hall area and about 75 percent complete in the theater area. Frantz explained that work in the theater area was slowed somewhat by the orchestra pit, which "is 25 feet down into the ground and had to be well-pointed."

In all, about 50 workers are busily engaged in construction activities on the site. Basic Construction Company of Newport News is the general contractor. The structural engineer is Abiouness, Cross and Bradshaw, Inc. of Norfolk. Montague-Betts Company, Inc. of Lynchburg is the steel fabricator/erector and the associated architects are Walsh & Ashe Associates of Virginia Beach and Odell Associates, Inc. of Charlotte, N.C.

Steel framework begins to take shape for the new Virginia Beach Arts and Conference Center. This imposing facility, with an architectural design featuring ten barrel vaults, each one 60 feet at its apex, is scheduled for completion in the spring of 1980. Steelwork for the 215 x 670-foot structure should be virtually complete by the first quarter of 1979.

Hospitality Night reception

The Tidewater City Council of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority will hold its annual Hospitality Night reception for members and guests at 7:30 p.m., Jan. 31, at the Virginia Beach Recreational Center.

Highlighting the evening will be a special welcome ceremony for two Nu Phi Mu chapters, which have recently joined the Tidewater City Council.

Members and friends of the sorority wishing further information, should contact Lynda Johnson-424-2704.

Recycle for money

Reynolds Metals Company pays 17 cents a pound for all aluminum beverage cans and other clean household aluminum items such as pie pans, foil, frozen food and dinner trays, dip, and pudding and meat containers.

In February, Reynolds mobile recycling unit will be at the Civic Center (Dome), 19th and Pacific Ave., every Wednesday from 1 to 2:30; and at the Recycling Service Center, 1435 Air Rail Ave., Tuesday thru Saturday from 9 to 4:30.

Story times for kids in school

Two branches of the Virginia Beach Public Library System present story times each week specifically designed for children ages five through eight. These programs are geared to the child that has had some school experience and loves the wonderful stories that can be found in books.

The story times are given at the Oceanfront branch (1811 Arctic Ave.) library on Wednesdays at 3:30 p.m. and at the Windsor Woods (3612 S. Plaza Trail) branch library on Thursdays at 4 p.m.

Children do not have to register in advance for these story times and there is no charge for the programs.

Please encourage your child to attend or the programs will be discontinued if there is no demand for the programs.

Charitable groups must register

All professional fund-raisers, professional solicitors, and charitable organizations wishing to solicit contributions in the state of Virginia must now register with the Office of Consumer Affairs of the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

Under state law the registration for charitable organizations consists of filing either an initial registration form or applying under one of the exemptions provided by law.

The rules and regulations governing charitable solicitations are available, along with copies of the law, from the Office of Consumer Affairs. In addition anyone wishing to make an inquiry or complaint dealing with charitable solicitations can obtain forms from that office.

Write to: Office of Consumer Affairs, P.O. Box 1163, Richmond, Virginia, 23209.

Public hearing on traffic system

The city of Virginia Beach Public Works Department will hold a public meeting regarding the proposed traffic circulation system for Atlantic Avenue and Pacific Avenue in the Beach Borough. The meeting will be held on Friday, Feb. 2, at 2 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Civic Center (DOME).

Srinivantu to play at VWC

The first Virginia appearance of Srinivantu will take place this Sunday, Feb. 4, at 2 p.m. at Hofheimer Library Bldg., room 203, at Virginia Wesleyan College. Admission is free and the general public invited.

Srinivantu plays a unique blend of western chamber and eastern mystical music. Most of their pieces are embellishments of songs written by Sri Chinmoy, the noted Indian mystic. As such, the music has a definite spiritual nature which makes it conducive to meditation. At the same time, the music moves fast, it has counterline and variety.

Srinivantu has played at Carnegie Hall, Lincoln Center, the United Nations, and Town Hall, New York. In the spring of 1978 the group toured all the universities in New York State and were appointed by New York's Mayor Beame to represent "Project Sunshine." The ensemble has also played at international receptions for Lillian Carter and the U Thant family, and performed on TV and radio.

The ten member group plays instruments ranging from violin and trumpet to hammer dulcimer and tabla. Guitarist Omar Mesa recorded five albums with Mandrill; Lewis Kahn (violin) has recorded with Dizzy Gillespie and performs with Carlos Santana; trombonist Howard Prince is a regular with the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra and released an album of his own original music on the CRI label.

After the concert, the audience will be invited to join a brief meditation. Specific meditation techniques will be taught and practiced.

Beach libraries offer special services for senior citizens

The Virginia Beach Public Libraries are now offering two new services to senior citizens—large print books and reading magnification equipment. A collection of 200 large print books specifically selected to meet the reading needs of older adults is now available at the newly opened Oceanfront Branch Library.

Reading magnification equipment may be borrowed by senior citizens from each of the city's five branch libraries and the bookmobile. The equipment and books are being made available through a contract with the Southeastern Virginia Area-wide Model Program, Inc. (SEVAMP).

Although the large print books at the Oceanfront Branch Library are primarily for use by senior citizens, patrons of all ages are encouraged to try this format. The collection includes popular fiction and non-fiction titles. It is anticipated that each branch in the system will purchase 100 new large print titles during 1979.

In addition, all branch libraries and the bookmobile now loan handheld flashlight magnifiers to senior citizens for use in their homes. Magnifiers will not only make newspapers and magazines easier to read, they also assist individuals in reading newspapers, magazines, telephone numbers as well as instructions and warnings associated with consumer products.

In the near future each branch library will also loan a desk-mounted unit that permits the reader to have free use of the hands while enjoying the benefits of precision magnification.

Large print books and reading magnification devices are two of the ways that the Virginia Beach Public Library is attempting to meet the library and information needs unique to senior citizens. For further information about these and other services, call 340-7798.

IF THE LAST THING YOU'VE GOT COMING IS JUST A GOLD WATCH, IT'S TIME TO TALK TO FIRST.

It's estimated that over 40 million American workers are employed in jobs that offer no retirement benefits whatever.

The First Savings Individual Retirement Account.

It's money you set aside yourself each year. (Up to 15% of your earned income, of $1500, whichever is less. Or $1750 if your spouse doesn't work.)

And it's important to note that this money isn't taxed until you use it at retirement. So not only are you planning for tomorrow, you're actually saving today.

Obviously, in order to get the maximum benefits from an Individual Retirement Account, you need to deal with an institution that pays the maximum legal rate, like First Savings does. And you'll need the advice of someone who understands the plan—and can explain it in a way you'll understand.

Which is where First Savings really shines. Because our Retirement Account Representatives are not only completely up-to-date on every aspect of the IRA plan, their enthusiastic, bend-over-backwards attitude is second to none.

In fact, they'll be happy to talk to you at a First Savings Office, or sit down with you in your home or place of employment.

The First Savings approach to Individual Retirement.

It's one more way we work for you. By helping you work for you.

Lesson for Virginia

Tarheels attack Vepco management

We have to admire Governor Jim Hunt of North Carolina and the Tarheel General Assembly. When something is wrong they don't stand around with their tongues in their mouths.

Northeastern North Carolina has the same problem with Vepco electricity rates that has afflicted Virginia. But they mean to do something about it. We hope Governor John Dalton, and the entire Virginia General Assembly are watching (and learning).

The 85-member Public Staff of the N.C. Utilities Commission gets right to the point. They say Vepco has been guilty of gross mismanagement costing customers in North Carolina millions of dollars. They want it stopped.

The Public Staff recognizes its responsibility to represent consumers in utility matters. They want corrective action and they want it now. The problem is with Vepco's management. They make their point in plain talk:

"The pattern of bad, neglectful, and unresponsive management in power production has cost Vepco's ratepayers many millions of dollars, and will continue to do so until substantial corrective action is taken. The continued excess costs associated with these intolerable conditions and circumstances should no longer be passed on to Vepco's ratepayers."

The Vepco response is the same old stuff we have been hearing for years in Virginia. People who criticize Vepco, they say, are a bunch of noisy trouble makers lacking a mature understanding of economic realities.

Vepco president Stanley Ragone said the North Carolina review was done by a staff without much operational or management experience. "I've been in this business for 30 years," he said, "and everything I've ever done has been to produce energy at the lowest practical cost."

Virginia officials have accepted, almost encouraged, these kind of statements from Vepco management. Discussing slow light bill payers three years ago, SCC chairman Junie Bradshaw said, "Cut their lights off one time and they will pay." After a 1974 Vepco rate hike, Governor Mills Godwin said that if the cost of electricity was too high, Virginians could always use kerosene lamps.

And just four months ago Ragone said that if Vepco didn't get the full rate increase they want, "We'll be right back in for the difference in January, February or March — whenever we can get the data in." Such overbearing arrogance! They say he learned it from Justin Moore.

North Carolina, seeing Vepco rates much higher than Duke Power and other utility companies, is having none of this. If Vepco tries these tactics with North Carolina, there're going to start a street brawl. The Tarheels don't want more excuses, more words. They want "accountability," a word that translates into, "This is bad. Who's gonna fix it?"

In order to fix anything, you first have to be sure what that "thing" is. Having the greatest cure in the world for the common cold doesn't help a heck of a lot if the ailment you're treating is the mumps. Giving Vepco more and more money every year doesn't cure anything. We must look to Vepco's board of directors to fix the problem. They should select a new management team that can get more from the money they already have.

In all matters dealing with management, the Vepco board has been publicly silent. They give management a pat on the back and say they are doing a good job. They call this being tactful.

We offer this advice to the members of the Vepco board of directors: Tact is not exercised by making a dash for cover. Be sure, when you think you are being extremely tactful, that you are not in reality running away from something you ought to face. In the final analysis, it is the board of directors that is responsible for the management of Vepco.

Mismanagement at the highest levels, alleged and real, is irritating Virginians and now North Carolinians. Vepco is operating in an hostile atmosphere. In the face of such pressure, Vepco's board of directors can't stand pat. It must move.

Vepco directors and Vepco customers should share the same hope and should be united in a desire to get a handle on mismanagement, exorbitant costs and exploding rates. We have to live together, let's work together. Let's do something about this management problem.

Go get 'em, Tarheels! —H.B.

Local sports interest

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

It's nice to once again read about local high school sports in the pages of the SUN.

However, would you please devote some articles to high school wrestling (which at Cox High is more popular than other winter sports) which is in full swing this time of the year.

Sincerely,
John W. Kerr Jr.

Lesson in courtesy needed

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

I would like a valid reason why employees of all governments, from the lowest garbage collector, to the top man on all totem poles think they are superior to the rest of the citizens?

After all, they are servants of the people, whose taxes pay their wages, and, probably without those dollars, they would be hungry.

What prompted this? This morning I had occasion to call the Treasurer's Office. My clock said 30 seconds to 9 a.m. When the office failed to answer, I called the switchboard and was curtly informed, "They don't open till 9 o'clock." Bang!

Ten minutes after opening time I called, got the office, and was courteously served. So no complaint there!

Whoever hired the girl on the general switchboard had better give her a lesson in courtesy. After all, the people of Virginia Beach are paying for her bread and butter.

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest, but it has happened so often with city workers, I just had to explode this time.

Very truly yours,
Mrs. L.B. Walker

Candidacy announced

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

I wish to announce to the people of Virginia Beach that I intend to be a candidate for the constitutional office of Clerk of the Circuit Court, City of Virginia Beach, subject to the Democratic Primary to be held Tuesday, June 12, 1979.

I have been a resident of Princess Anne County and the City of Virginia Beach for 19 years. I am 44 years old, married, have two children, and in good health. I have been in the education profession for 19 years; the past 10 in the City of Virginia Beach as a teacher, coach, and administrator.

I have resigned my current position with the school system as assistant supervisor of Pupil Personnel Services effective Feb. 1, 1979. I am resigning my position so that the School Board of our city will not in any way be involved in partisan politics and that I will not be on the payroll of this city and state as a public employee while an active candidate for public office.

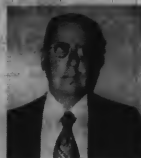

I intend to campaign full-time between now and election day, and if elected, I will be a full-time public servant and my door will always be open to serve the people.

Medicare insurance deductible rises

Because of the rising cost of hospital care, the hospital insurance deductible and daily co-insurance amounts under Medicare have been increased for 1979.

The law requires an annual review of hospital costs under Medicare and an adjustment of the hospital insurance deductible when costs have risen substantially. The amount of the deductible represents the average cost of one day of hospital care, which is determined by a formula provided in the law.

Effective Jan. 1, the hospital insurance deductible is $160, up from $144 for 1978. This means that for the 1st through 60th day of inpatient hospital care in each benefit period, Medicare hospital insurance will pay for all covered services except for the first $160.

The higher deductible amount for 1979 applies to benefit periods which start in or after Jan. 1979. The 1978 deductible, $144, applies to benefit periods which started in 1978. This is true if you entered a hospital in 1978 and are still an inpatient after Jan. 1.

When the hospital insurance deductible changes, the law requires comparable changes in the daily dollar amounts (co-insurance) that Medicare hospital insurance does not pay.

For the 61st through 90th day of inpatient hospital care in each benefit period in 1979, hospital insurance will pay for all covered services except for $40 a day (up from $36).

If you need to be in a hospital longer than 90 days in a benefit period, you can use the inpatient hospital reserve days provided by hospital insurance. For each reserve day used this year, hospital insurance will pay for all covered services except for $80 a day ($72 a day in 1978).

For the 21st through 100th day of post-hospital care in a skilled nursing facility, hospital insurance will pay for all covered services except for $20 a day (increased from $18). Hospital insurance pays the full cost of covered services for the first 20 days of care in a skilled nursing facility.

After a stay in a hospital or skilled nursing facility, hospital insurance will pay for all covered services except for $20 a day (increased from $18). Hospital insurance pays the full cost of covered services for the first 20 days of care in a skilled nursing facility.

After a stay in a hospital or skilled nursing facility, hospital insurance can cover home health care from a participating home health agency.

Hospital insurance can pay the full cost of up to 100 home health visits in the 12 month period after the start of one benefit period and before the start of another.

Although hospital insurance does not pay all your health care costs, it does provide basic protection against the high cost of illness at a time when you need it most — after you are 65 or while you are severely disabled.

TIDEWATER COMMUNITY COLLEGE-VA BEACH

Today College Counts

By Dr. William Bridges
Director of Continuing Education

COOPERATIVE EDUCATION

One of the functions of Tidewater Community College is to prepare students for the "real world" of employment. Accepting and carrying out the responsibilities of a job are qualities which cannot be taught in the classroom, but which are essential to one's success in the work environment.

Cooperative Education is a program which allows TCC students to learn about the responsibilities of work in their chosen fields while earning pay and academic credit for work performed in private business and industry. The work must be related to the student's curriculum of study.

Through the Cooperative Education program, private firms hire TCC students, usually on a part-time basis, to perform the work of a regular employee. The student and his employer work out a program of concrete goals which the student must meet during the school quarter, and TCC awards academic credit for the student's successful completion of the work.

Many Tidewater Community College students are already working when they enter college. Through the Co-op program, these students may earn credit for their work, if it is related to their curriculum. If a student is interested in Cooperative Education but does not have a curriculum-related job, the Co-op coordinator will find employment for the student.

The student can take Co-op as part of full-time or part-time study. In fact, because of the schedule of work and classes, many TCC Co-op students attend classes part-time.

One obvious advantage of the Co-op program is the "real-life" experience it affords the student. There are many college graduates working in fields other than what they studied in college simply because they did not really know what their work would involve until after they had graduated and gotten that first job. That is too late to learn you are in the wrong business. Through the Cooperative Education program, students get a realistic picture of their career choices.

Notes from the shelter industry

How much of a home can you afford?

By LIN J. COOPER

Director of Communications Tidewater Builders Association

One of the first steps in buying a new home is deciding how much of a home you can afford.

Contrary to popular opinion, the rules used by lenders to determine mortgage loan ceilings for loan applicants are not etched in stone. Instead, mortgage lenders follow general guidelines that may vary from time to time depending on the local economic conditions as well as the financial situation of their lending institution. For example, when there's a plentiful supply of mortgage money and demand for credit is light, lenders are likely to relax their mortgage guidelines. When money is scarce, on the other hand, the guidelines are usually tightened, making it harder for home buyers to qualify for loans.

The general rule of thumb used by lenders is that your monthly mortgage payment (principal and interest), plus your monthly payments to cover home insurance and real estate taxes, should not exceed 25 to 30 percent of your gross monthly income.

In determining your monthly income, lenders must consider steady income of both husband and wife, including part-time income, alimony and child support.

If you're in line for a big raise or promotion six months from now, have your boss put it in writing and pass the letter on to your lender when you apply for your mortgage loan. Lenders will consider your potential earning power as well as your present salary.

Take a look, too, at your present debts, including such things as car loans, major medical bills and revolving charge accounts. Lenders will look at all debt obligations that will take 8 to 10 months or longer to pay off when calculating your home buying power.

Generally, lenders require that your total monthly installment debt—including your house, car and credit card payments—does not exceed 33 percent of your gross monthly income. If you're saddled with some major debts, it's a good idea to pay off some of them before you apply for a mortgage loan. The less you owe elsewhere, the more you will be able to borrow to buy a home.

Next, the lender will examine your credit rating, job and salary history. The lender also will want some assurance that you have enough money on hand to cover the down payment as well as closing costs, which can run several thousand dollars in some high cost areas.

If your mortgage loan application is rejected because your income is too low, don't panic. You still have plenty of options: (a) increase the size of your down payment; (b) pay off your other debts; (c) stretch the repayment period from, say, 25 years to 30 years; (d) negotiate with another lending institution; (e) check on the lender's willingness to make a graduated payment mortgage (GPMs) with FHA or private mortgage insurance.

Graduated payment mortgages are designed to help young buyers who would not otherwise qualify for the standard fixed rate, level payment mortgage because their incomes are too low. Under the GPM plan, the monthly mortgage payment is less than the standard mortgage payment during the first several years. The payments steadily rise over a period of years but, by that time, the homeowner's income has gone up enough to cover the increased mortgage payments.

The demand and supply factor is another key element of the mortgage lending business. When lending institutions are short on money, they are a lot more selective in making loans. Naturally, borderline mortgage loan applicants are the first to be rejected. However, when savings institutions have a surplus of funds, they usually stretch their lending guidelines to the limit.

One word of caution, though. Be realistic when figuring out how much of a home you can afford. In home buying, some short term sacrifices can pay some big dividends down the road. But make sure that you can live with those sacrifices. For in the final analysis, you're the one who is going to have to make those monthly payments.

"Housing Opportunity for all Americans"

The National Association of Home Builders Adopted January 23, 1979

Our country's number one problem in 1979 is inflation. Inflation touches virtually every aspect of our lives: the price of the food we eat, the homes in which we live, the goods and services we purchase. For more and more Americans inflation is forcing the question—where will we live and where will our children live in the future?

As the federal government continues deficit spending, there are some who believe that we as a nation have lost our discipline and resolve to effectively combat inflation, and instead have adopted a philosophy of living with the problem. Moreover, our failure to meet and beat the problem of inflation is reflected abroad in the decline of the dollar.

Inflation and the tendency toward greater government regulation of the private sector are placing a heavy burden on the consumer.

In attacking inflation President Carter has called on the private sector to voluntarily adopt wage and price guidelines. However, inflation cannot be alleviated by the private sector alone. The federal government must stop deficit spending. Instead, the Administration is using tight monetary policy in an attempt to shore up the dollar abroad and cool inflation at home. Fighting inflation with monetary policy alone strikes at housing and destroys for many Americans the dream of home ownership—their best hedge against inflation.

We are the best housed nation in the world and almost all of our housing is produced and acquired in a free market economy. The challenge of providing decent shelter for all Americans is not new to this country nor to the home building industry. The needs and desires of our citizens are causing an ever increasing demand for shelter, and we as an industry must be able to meet that demand, and meet it through the free enterprise system.

In order to allow the housing industry to meet this challenge the National Association of Home Builders recommends the following:

To Fight Inflation

- Urge the Administration and Congress to proceed towards a balanced federal budget with reductions in all federal programs.

- Continue reform of the Civil Service and reduce the number of federal employees through elimination of non-productive jobs.

- Seek legislation requiring cost-benefit studies of all new regulations before they are implemented, and establish "sunset" laws for all existing regulations and require Congressional review of renewal. The legislation should require all regulatory agencies to continually review regulations and eliminate those which unnecessarily harass business, with little or no resulting benefit to employees or consumers.

- Oppose unnecessary federal, state and local and use regulations and restrictions which delay development, and increase costs to builders and consumers alike.

- Strongly oppose the use of high interest rates and tight money supply as the primary means of fighting inflation.

To Improve the Supply of Building Materials

- Encourage better management of National Forests allowing increased harvests of timber from federal lands, and properly fund the reforestation program to ensure future timber needs.

- Urge removal of the timber harvest moratorium on the millions of acres of National Forests which the Department of Agriculture has recommended for multiple use under the Roadless Area Review and Evaluation II, and allow harvest on those acres.

- Encourage expansion of plant capacity to meet the needs for increased materials for production of new and rehabilitated housing, and alleviate shortages of building materials which increase costs.

- Oppose unnecessary environmental regulations which escalate the cost of building materials such as lumber and cement.

To Provide an Adequate Supply of Skilled Labor

- Endorse the continuation of the various training programs for skilled labor in the building crafts.

- Urge stabilization of housing production to maintain the supply of skilled labor capable of producing a better home at a lower cost.

To Provide Greater Housing Opportunity at Affordable Prices

- Seek legislation to assist young and middle-income people to purchase their first home when they could not otherwise qualify for mortgage financing.

- Seek development and implementation of new mortgage instruments to increase opportunities for providing homes for all Americans.

- Seek new sources of funds for mortgages such as pension funds; life insurance companies, and mortgage-backed securities.

- Applaud the recent moves by the Government Accounting Office and by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to look into the propriety of savings and loan associations and their service corporations engaging in land development and home building. We believe these activities are beyond the original intent of legislation and should be corrected. Financing is the key to the home building industry. When the entities which control financing also become competitors in land development and home construction; a monopolistic situation develops; history of monopolies proves that the result clearly will be a reduction in the choice available to the

Thalia sixth grade students re-live Renaissance

Sixth grade students of the Virginia Beach Public Schools gifted program at Thalia School have not only been studying the Renaissance recently, but they have also been living it.

The classrooms of Lillie Gilbert and Pati Terry were transformed into settings of the 1400-1600 period in Western Europe known as the Renaissance. Special archways were constructed and furnishings of the era were brought in. The teachers donned costumes of that time, as did the students. Besides the authentic tights, cocked hats, and cloaks, many of the boys sported painted-on moustaches.

With those preliminaries out of the way, they began their study of the historical period and its literature. Assuming such identities as Vasco de Gama and William Shakespeare, among others, they presented dramatizations of the literary works.

The classroom experiment was called a complete success by teachers and students of the gifted program alike.

The top four winners of the 27th annual Keep Virginia Green Poster Contest were announced at the annual awards luncheon of the Virginia Forestry Association, on Jan. 30. Winning top prize and $435 in cash was Jamie Beckus from Virginia Beach VO-Tech Education Center.

This year 19,101 posters were drawn for the contest, compared to 16,136 in 1978; 414 schools entered the statewide contest. The theme of the 1979 contest was "Keep Virginia Beautiful," and posters were to illustrate the many ways to help keep our state clean, at work, on the farm and at home.

With a total of over $3200 in cash prizes, the contest is open each fall to students in grades 1-12 in any public or private Virginia school. Prizes are awarded by grade, with a total of 739 student prizes and 12 teacher awards. The remaining 735 winners and the teacher awards will be announced by March 1.

He is serving as a member of the 3d Battalion, 6th Marines, homebased at Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune, N.C.

He is one of more than 1,000 U.S. Marine personnel taking part in the three-week exercise that is designed to test combat readiness in extreme cold weather conditions. Training will include survival techniques, snowshoeing, skiing, survival shelter construction, air-delivery of supplies, unit tactics and live firing of individual and supporting weapons.

A 1976 graduate of Princess Anne High School, Eardley joined the Marine Corps in June 1976.

Bruyneel

Navy Mess Management Specialist Third Class John F. Bruyneel, son of Louis K. and Joanne G. Bruyneel of 404 Seeman, Virginia Beach, has reported for duty with Attack Squadron 35 at the Oceana Naval Air Station, Virginia Beach.

He joined the Navy in November 1976.

Civilian, military personnel attend prayer breakfast

The Enlisted Dining Facility at Fleet Combat Training Center, Atlantic, Dam Neck, Virginia Beach was the sight of the local celebration of the National Prayer Breakfast Jan. 19.

The prayer breakfast was originally the Presidential

Prayer Breakfast when President Eisenhower and prayer groups from the House of Representatives and the Senate established the tradition in 1952.

The National Prayer Breakfast usually coincides with the convening of Congress. The leaders of our country, both civilian and military, meet in recognition of the moral and religious values upon which the United States is founded. The prayer breakfast at Dam Neck was well attended by civilian and military personnel from all commands on base.

In his words of welcome, Commanding Officer of FCTCL, Captain D.M. Agnew Jr. set the spirit of the meeting with these words, "We as a nation return to that which is unchangeable, faith in the Living God, to ensure the continuation of our basic freedoms and rights."

Other principal speakers were Chaplain W.E. Dodson, who was also the coordinator of the Dam Neck breakfast, Captain L.F. Demmin, CO of Naval Guided Missiles School, LCDR C.B. Robbins, Captain J.E. Fernandes, CO of FCDSSA. Taped messages from Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and Naval Chief of Chaplains RADM J.J. O'Connor were played.

In closing the breakfast everyone joined in singing the Navy Hymn.

Attack Squadron Seventy Five undergoes change of command

In ceremonies held on board USS (CV-60) in port at Naples, Italy, on Jan. 12, Commander Anthony J. Lynch, U.S. Navy, relieved Commander Kenneth R. Werhan, U.S. Navy, as Commanding Officer of the "Sunday Punchers" of Attack Squadron Seventy Five. Principal speaker at the ceremony was Rear Admiral William B. Warwick, U.S. Navy, Commander Battle Group Two, a former Commanding Officer of this all-weather attack squadron.

Commander Werhan, who has been Commanding Officer of the "Sunday Punchers" since Oct. 18, 1977, will assume responsibilities as Air Operations Officer for the staff of Commander Task Force Sixty, homeported in Naples, Italy, in March of 1979. Skipper Werhan commanded the "Sunday Punchers" through two Mediterranean cruises aboard USS Saratoga (CV-60) and during his tenure the squadron completed over three years of accident-free operations amounting to more than 15,000 operational flight hours and over 4800 carrier arrested landings. Commander Werhan himself has more than 2900 flight hours in the A-6, an all-weather jet attack aircraft built by Grumman Aircraft Corporation, and a career total of more than 890 carrier arrested landings.

Commander "Tony" Lynch, the new Commanding

Officer, is no stranger to the "Sunday Punchers" or to the A-6 aircraft. He is currently in his second tour with the squadron, which began in October 1977 when he assumed responsibilities as Executive Officer. An "Intruder" combat veteran with over 2600 flight hours in the A-6, Commander Lynch has been awarded two Distinguished Flying Crosses, thirteen Air Medals, the Navy Commendation Medal with Combat "V", the Presidential Unit Citation, and three Navy Unit Commendations. Commander Lynch, his wife Mary Anna, and their three children reside in Virginia Beach.

Attack Squadron Seventy Five is one of the oldest attack squadrons in the U.S. Navy. In September 1963 the squadron became the first operational A-6 all-weather attack squadron and subsequently distinguished itself with its initial deployment of the aircraft to Southeast Asia. The "Sunday Punchers" made two subsequent deployments to Vietnam and in 1973 received the RADM C. Wade McCloskey Award as the best attack squadron in the Navy. The squadron is currently in the middle of its eighth A-6 deployment to the Mediterranean and is scheduled to return to its homeport at Naval Air Station Oceana, Virginia Beach, in early April 1979.

Castiglione

Navy Seaman Nicholas Castiglione, whose wife, Brenda, is the daughter of Billy Gable of 5317 Bonnydale Road, Virginia Beach, has reported for duty aboard the USS Nimitz Hill, homeported in Norfolk.

He joined the Navy in November 1976.

The City Council and the Housing and Community Development Citizens Advisory Committee for the City of Virginia Beach Invite you to Attend a Public Hearing

WHEN:

TIME:

2:00 P.M.

WHERE:

City Council Chambers
Administration Building, 2nd floor
Municipal Center
Virginia Beach, Virginia

WHY:

In April, 1979, the City of Virginia Beach, through its Fifth Program Year Application, will apply for federal funds to carry out community development and housing activities for 1979-80. This application will include a comprehensive strategy (community development plan and housing assistance plan) for meeting the City's community development and housing needs for the next three (3) years. The City Council and the Citizens Advisory Committee would like to hear comments from individual citizens, church groups, civic leagues, etc. on the following topic:

- Proposed Activities for the Fifth Program Year Application.

On the basis of comments received from public hearings in January, 1979, the Citizens Advisory Committee will propose activities for the Fifth Program Year applications to City Council. These proposed activities will be published in The Beacon on Sunday, February 11, 1979.

The following list contains examples of activities for which these federal monies CAN BE SPENT.

1. The purchase of property which is:

- blighted, deteriorating, undeveloped, or inappropriately developed;
- appropriate for rehabilitation or conservation;
- appropriate for the preservation or restoration of historic sites, the beautification of urban land, the conservation of open spaces, natural resources, scenic areas, the provision of recreational opportunities, or the guidance of urban development; and
- to be used for public works, facilities, improvements, or other public purposes eligible for funding.

2. Public facilities and improvements, including senior centers, centers for the handicapped, and neighborhood facilities.

3. Disposal of property acquired by the community development and housing activities.

4. Property clearance activities.

5. Public services, including those concerned with employment, economic development, crime prevention, child care, health, drug abuse, education, welfare, recreation, and program coordinations needs, but only -

- when such services are not otherwise available;
- in low and moderate income areas where concentrated community development or housing activities are being carried out;
- if such services are necessary to support community development and housing activities; and
- if assistance in providing or securing such services under other federal programs has been denied or not made available.

6. Payment of the City's share in federal grants-in-aid programs undertaken as part of community development and housing activities.

7. Relocation payments and assistance to persons and businesses displaced by community development housing activities.

8. Payments to housing owners for loss or rental income while they are temporarily holding units for persons displaced by community development and housing activities, until these activities are completed.

9. Removal of physical barriers restricting the mobility of elderly and handicapped persons.

10. Completion of existing urban renewal projects.

11. Rehabilitation of public and private properties in pursuit of the goals of the Community Development Program.

12. Code enforcement in deteriorating areas.

13. Economic development activities appropriate to community revitalization or expansion of economic opportunities for lower income persons.

14. Activities by local development corporations for community economic development or neighborhood revitalization.

15. Planning and administrative costs of community development activities.

The following list includes examples of activities for which these federal funds CANNOT BE SPENT.

- Facilities for general government use, such as city halls and police stations.
- Facilities for exhibitions, spectator events or cultural purposes, such as stadiums and museums.
- Schools for the general population.
- Transportation facilities, such as airports and bus terminals.
- Medical facilities, such as hospitals and nursing homes.
- General government expenses.
- New housing construction.
- Income payments and housing allowances.

Citizen input is most essential for effectively fulfilling the obligation of the Community Development Block Grant Program to principally benefit low- and moderate-income persons in Virginia Beach.

If you have an activity proposal but are not sure whether it is eligible for this program, please feel free to call the Office of Community Development (427-4721) for assistance in determining eligibility.

If you cannot attend the public hearing, please submit your comments to Mr. Benjamin C. Moore, Director, Office of Community Development, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23456.

Unemployment fraud leads to conviction

Woodrow Wilson Middett Jr., a Virginia Beach resident, was convicted in Richmond General District Court Jan. 22 of making false statements or withholding material facts to obtain unemployment insurance benefits.

Middett, 41, of the 400 block of Cronin Road, was fined $250 for the misdemeanor conviction.

The charges were brought by C.B. Pierce, an investigator with the Virginia Employment Commission's fraud investigation unit.

Students may be exempt

Employees, particularly students, who had no tax liability in 1978 and expect to have none this year can claim exemption from withholding of Federal income tax by making the proper notation on Form W-4, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate." These employees will have no Federal income tax withheld on wages paid during the year, the Internal Revenue Service said.

The advantage to the individual, according to the IRS, is that he or she will not have to file a return solely to claim a refund. However, claiming exemption from withholding of Federal income tax has no effect on a taxpayer's liability for payment of social security (FICA) tax.

The exemption from withholding expires on April 30 of each year unless a new Form W-4 is filed before that date.

If an employee does not file Form W-4, the employer is required by law to withhold income tax without permitting any allowances.

Annual field crop conference takes place Thursday

The 3rd Annual Field Crop Conference will be held on Thursday, Feb. 1, at the Mariner Resort Inn and Conference Center, 57th Street and Oceanfront, Virginia Beach. The conference is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. with coffee and doughnuts beginning at 8:30 a.m. The program concludes at 3:30 p.m.

Tickets are $2 each and may be purchased at the door (includes admission to the conference, exhibit room, drawing for door prizes and lunch). The program is being sponsored by the Southeast Virginia Extension Service (Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Accomack, Northampton, Suffolk, Isle of Wight and Southampton) in cooperation with the area's Agribusiness Industries.

Keynote speaker for the conference will be Forest L. Goetsch, Chairman of the Board of Doane Agricultural Service, Inc., St. Louis, Missouri. His topic will be "Corn, Soybeans, Wheat: 1979 Supply Production and Price." Dr. Henry P. Wilson of the Virginia Truck and Ornamentals Research Station at Painter, Va., will speak on the postemergence control of weeds in field crops and Ed Felton of Old Dominion Beef will talk on Old Dominion Beef's future economic effect on the grain farmer.

Corn, soybean and wheat fertilization practices will be discussed and a special segment on no-till corn production has been scheduled. In addition, a panel discussion on financial management in agriculture will be held. Panel participants will include several of the area's leading bankers and farm credit representatives.

Throughout the day, specialists from the area's Agribusiness Industries will have exhibits on display and be available to answer any questions area farmers may have about their product.

For additional information contact the Virginia Beach Extension Services office at 427-4611.

POLICY

consumer and a further escalation of the cost of housing.

To Assist Consumers

- Continue to represent the consumers' interests in the purchase of new housing as exemplified by our efforts to develop improved materials and building techniques, pursue new methods of home financing, and to seek sound legislation which assures Americans of their basic right to own their own home at an affordable price.
- Increase utilization of the Home Owner's Warranty Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of the National Association of Home Builders that offers home buyers a ten-year buyer's protection plan.

To Improve Land Use Policy

- Ask that land use policy development and control be retained at the lowest possible level of government.
- Vigorously oppose environmental standards and regulations that are imposed for the purpose of "no growth" or exclusionary reasons rather than for their intended purpose of providing a healthier environment.
- Oppose unreasonable local land-use standards and regulations which hamper the development of single and multifamily homesites and commercial/industrial service areas at affordable prices to the consumers.

Urban and Suburban Development

- Urge the Administration and Congress to consider the needs of both urban and suburban development in formulating and implementing housing policy to assure that Americans will continue to have the freedom to choose where they live.

To Ensure Proper Application of Energy Standards

- Encourage the Department of Energy and other federal and state agencies to incorporate the NAHB Thermal Performance Guidelines in the development of federal and state energy use standards.

Conclusion

As an industry rooted in the improvement of the quality of life, we are proud of the fact that, more than any other group in the country, we make property owners of Americans, thereby giving them a greater stake in our nation's future. We want to assure our customers that our business goal is creating a good product at a price they can afford. We perceive our main role to be unification of all elements of the housing industry to work together during these inflationary times to achieve a stabilized housing production at a level for the good of all Americans, considering the basic need for shelter, the influence on the economy, and the importance of preserving our free enterprise housing industry.

ELECTION

The Tidewater Builders Association is an affiliate of NAHB, which represents the home building industry to Congress, develops housing programs, formulates national housing goals, and conducts research to develop new technologies in housing materials and construction. NAHB has been the foremost proponent of monetary policies that provide for a consistent and equitable distribution of the money supply for mortgage credit at reasonable rates. Its efforts led to Congressional commitments for federal assistance for housing families with low and moderate incomes in urban and rural America, and it pioneered a national Home Owner's Warranty program. (HOW)

Election to this national office is another in a long list of credits and accomplishments achieved by Fred Napolitano, who entered the industry as an apprentice bricklayer when he was 18 years old. Today he is Vice-Chairman of the Board of Directors of Terry Corporation of Virginia, principal of Pembroke Square Associates, developer of Pembroke Mall Shopping Center, and principal of Pembroke Associates, developer of Pembroke Office Park.

In addition to his numerous professional activities he serves as director of Birthright, Inc., in Virginia Beach, is director of the Virginia Beach Beautification Committee and is a part president of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce and is a past president of the Virginia Catholic Church and is director of St. Mary's Infants Home in Norfolk. Napolitano and his wife Jacqueline live in Birdneck Point in Virginia Beach. They have four children, Theresa, Vincent, Frederick II and John.

everything. The series stresses theory, technique, keyboard exploration and improvisation. "We approach it from every angle," says Noonan, "and place a strong emphasis on creativity from the first level. Students learn to play classical, contemporary, religious and popular songs."

The course's success has led to many lecture and workshop engagements, and so the husband and wife team are often on the road. This year's schedule includes two weeks in London, one in Scotland, and numerous stops across the United States.

"But we always come home to Virginia Beach," Carol Noonan is quick to add. Noonan nods his head in agreement. "I just love it here. I wouldn't want to live anywhere else."

MARKET PLACE

The classified section of your hometown newspaper is essentially the bulletin board and market place of the community. It locates the interested customer as no other advertising can do. This is because the customers in your neighborhood turn to the classified pages and search out the advertisement for what he or her wants to buy.

Taxpayers Can Claim Energy Tax Credit

Taxpayers can claim tax credits for residential energy expenditures made during the period April 20, 1977 through Dec. 31, 1978 when they file their 1978 individual income tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service today announced.

The IRS emphasized that taxpayers who had qualifying expenditures during 1977 must claim the credits on their 1978 returns rather than file amended 1977 returns.

The Energy Tax Act of 1978 provides a tax credit of up to $300 for qualifying energy conservation materials installed in a home. There is also a separate credit of up to $2,000 for installation of certain renewable energy source expenditures. Generally, the credits are for expenditures made on or after April 20, 1977.

Qualifying energy conservation materials include insulation, storm doors and windows, caulking, weather-stripping and certain heating system modifications designed to conserve energy. Renewable energy source expenditures include those which use or transmit solar, wind or geothermal energy to heat, cool or provide hot water for a residence.

The IRS also pointed out that the credits could only be claimed by filing Form 1040.

The form for claiming the tax credits will be in the 1978 Form 1040 tax return packages that will be sent to taxpayers by the end of December. Form 5695, Energy Credits, which will be used to compute the credits will also be available at the same time from banks, post offices and IRS offices. Form 5695 should be attached to the return.

Further details on what qualifies and how to compute the tax credits are contained in Publication 903, Energy Credits for Individuals, available at most IRS offices.

Requirements for Filing 1978 Tax Return Set Forth

The following chart, based on filing status, shows the minimum amount of gross income which must be received in 1978 before a return is required to be filed:

Single.....	$2,950
Single (age 65 or over).....	$3,700
Married filing a joint return.....	$4,700
Married filing a joint return (one spouse age 65 or over).....	$5,450
Married filing a joint return (both spouses age 65 or over).....	$6,200
Married filing a separate return.....	$750
Surviving spouse (Qualifying widow(er) with dependent child).....	$3,950

In addition, you will have to file an income tax return if any of the three following requirements apply:

- You received tips from which social security tax was not withheld, even if your gross income was less than $2,950;
- You were in business for yourself and had net earnings of $400 or more from that business. This is called "self-employment income"; or,
- You had unearned income of $750 or more, such as dividends or interest from savings accounts, and can be claimed as a dependent by your parents. This is particularly important to students.

Avoid Common Errors

Before you mail your income tax return, check to be sure that you have:

- Transferred the peel-off address label to your return, and made any necessary corrections in your name, address, and social security number;
- Attached Wage and Tax Statement;
- Attached all required income;
- Reported all your taxable income;
- Rechecked your return to make sure you have made no mistake in your arithmetic;
- Signed your return (on a joint return, both husband and wife must sign);
- Attached your check or money order, payable to "Internal Revenue Service," if you owe additional tax, and have written your social security number on your check or money order;
- Addressed the return to the correct Internal Revenue Service Center or, better yet, used the envelope that came with your tax forms package.

And, be sure to file your return by April 16, 1979.

65 or Over?

Age does have advantages... Don't let your 65th birthday pass without checking on special tax benefits.

Dependency Tax Regulations Differ for Separated, Divorced Parents

Separated and divorced parents are subject to certain tax regulations when claiming children as dependents, the Internal Revenue Service advised.

Since each child can be claimed by only one parent, generally, the parent with custody of the child for the greater part of the year is entitled to the dependency deduction.

But there are two exceptions to the rule based upon terms of the divorce decree or other agreement and the amount contributed to the child's support by the parent without custody.

Divorced or separated parents should check the details of these exceptions in their tax instructions before either parent claims the children as dependents. Additional information is available free in IRS Publication 501, Your Exemptions and Exclusions for Dependents, and IRS Publication 504, Tax Information for Divorced or Separated Individuals, by filling out the order blank in the tax package.

Dividends Must be Reported

Dividends from corporations must be reported on your return, but they are ordinarily included in income only if the total received exceeds $100.

A husband and wife each may exclude from income up to $100 of the dividends each of them received during the year. However, neither may use any part of the other's exclusion. If one of them has dividends of less than $100, the exclusion will be the actual amount of the dividends received, and the other's exclusion will be no more than $100.

Sale of Personal Residence Change

For sales after July 26, 1978, individuals 55 and over are allowed a one-time exclusion of up to $100,000 of profit on the sale of their personal residence, the Internal Revenue Service said.

This replaces the provision that allowed individuals 65 and over to exclude all of the profit on the sale of their residence if the sales price was less than $35,000.

Additional information is available free in IRS Publication 523, "Tax Information on Selling or Purchasing Your Home," by filling out the order blank found in the tax package.

Capital Gains Changes Outlined

The amount of long-term capital gain that can be excluded has increased from 50% to 60% effective November 1, 1978, the Internal Revenue Service said.

If you received capital gain distributions, see the instruction for Form 1040, line 15. If you had other capital gains, see the instruction for Schedule D.

As part of your tax planning for 1979, you should note that the alternative tax computation for capital gains will expire after 1978.

Additional information is available free in IRS Publication 553, "Highlights of 1978 Changes in the Tax Law," by filling out the order blank found in the tax package.

Some things you can just count on. The sun will rise tomorrow morning. Harold Stassen will run for President. And Norfolk schools will dominate the Beach in basketball.

This season, Beach schools hold a collective 3-16 record against the city teams. Beach supporters will point to all kinds of reasons for this displeasing disparity. Major among their defenses is the fact that Norfolk schools still have junior varsity prepping while Virginia Beach's J.V. program has bitten the dust. But when all is said and done, this fact of life boils down to one thing.

Basketball is a city game.

Take a drive around the Beach. You'll see comfortable homes, grassy front lawns, open fields, amusement arcades, skateboard parks, water slides, horse stables, and of course, the beach itself.

There is rarely a lack of something to do or the means with which to do it. Kids play basketball, football, baseball, soccer - these are all sports, all fun, all games.

No go down to Norfolk. There are very few open fields waiting for a football game. Manicured Little League baseball complexes are rare. And you need room to hit a baseball, a bat to hit it with, and a glove to catch it. There is no lure of rolling surf. Skateboards are foreign - you might get hit by a car.

But there is plenty of concrete, and one worn basketball will do for a crowd. No more room is needed than an alleyway, a side of a building, or a parking lot.

Sure, there are alleys, buildings, and parking lots at the Beach. There is also an abundance of basketball courts, which are rarely crowded. And there is a whole lot more; that is the key. There are other things to do in the spring, summer, and fall. Basketball is played, but usually only during basketball season.

For many city kids, there are no seasons. Basketball is the king, and it rules year round. These kids play other things only when they can't play basketball. Other things are fun and games. Basketball is life.

This hunger . . . can be pinpointed as a major reason for city superiority on the court.

Many will forfeit school studies, a job, and hope for the future - all for the game. But for these kids, today is here and tomorrow can wait.

Watch a playground game in the city. There seems to be no method to this madness. The game is full of wild individual moves and flashy, often erratic, passes. Discipline is no more than a vocabulary word.

But a closer look reveals a hidden beauty in the crazy twists and "in your face" jumpers. To these kids, the game is a vehicle for expression. It's a series of challenges and confrontations. If a man scores on you, you don't simply score to get even. You've got to come back in a better, flashier way; you've got to answer him. To the city playground ballplayer, the game is a reflection of life. It gives him a chance to shine, to be the best - a chance he might not otherwise get.

You'll find playground ball at the Beach, but it lacks the intensity and fire of a city game. What is a good workout, a quick game of basketball in the suburbs, turns into a test of manhood and individual worth in the city.

And you won't just find athletes on the court in the city. Everybody plays ball. The star of the high school team will share the court with the school's egghead. Six-year olds work on their game, dreaming of future stardom while a thirty year old man agonizes as his jump shot fades and his legs grow weary.

Some Beach schools have a hard time getting twelve solid basketball players together. And for many of these ballplayers, basketball is not their only sport.

But when tryouts come in the city, where the game never ends, the gyms are filled with hungry young men - hungry for the chance to be a star, to shine.

Coaches often point to this element of hunger as a key to winning ball games. "You've gotta want it," they say. The tilt in a close game often goes to the team which is hungrier, and it only makes sense that a ballplayer who equates basketball with life and sees defeat as a kind of death will be hungrier for victory than one who is playing the game for "sport."

This hunger for the game, which drives many city kids onto the courts at a young age and keeps them there from then on, can be pinpointed as a major reason for city superiority on the court.

Beach schools will triumph now and then. An occasional dominating player can offset the city advantage, as First Colonial's Guy Morgan showed last year. Individual talents like Kempville's Mike Downs, Kellam's Daryl Christian, Cox's Myron Goffigan, and Princess Anne's Marvin Williams can play with the best the city has to offer.

But the city offers the best from top to bottom. Every spot on a city ballteam's roster is filled by a ballplayer who has been sharpened by sweltering summer days, windy fall months, and numbing winters on the playgrounds.

The teams are filled with raw talent from top to bottom, and the league is filled with tough teams - from top to bottom.

Norview, on the same level as Lake Taylor, dropped Beach leader Cox for the second time this year.

Washington, a premier area team, spotted Bayside an early lead before blowing by the Marlins to win.

And Kempville, the hottest team at the Beach, had their heels cooled by an overwhelming Maury team, whose only loss has been to Washington.

Add to these results the fact that Granby, the doormat of the city league, knocked off then #1 Princess Anne early in January, and the picture is complete.

Excellence demands dedication, and nothing is easier to dedicate oneself to than his life.

Beach District This Week

By MIKE D'ORSO

After a disastrous Tuesday night which saw four Beach basketball teams fall at the hands of Norfolk schools, Beach District play resumed Friday night with the three leaders claiming victories in hostile gyms.

Basketball Standings

	District	Overall
Cox	6-1	10-5
Princess Anne	5-2	10-4
Kempville	5-2	7-5
Bayside	3-4	4-10
First Colonial	1-6	3-11
Kellam	1-6	1-11

Kempville at Norview

Saturday
(Feb. 3)

Cox at Kempville
First Colonial at Bayside
Kellam at Princess Anne

Cox held on to their slim District lead with an equally slim 71-69 win over Kellam as Myron Goffigan's buzzer shot turned Daryl Christian's 41 points for Kellam into a futile effort.

Princess Anne found out that Bayside is, indeed, for real as the Marlins gave the Cavaliers all they could handle before falling 69-66.

Meanwhile, Kempville had to play the final three quarters at First Colonial without Mike Downs, who was injured early in the game, and the Chiefs responded with a hard-fought 59-54 win over the frustrated Patriots.

Downs out for Chiefs

Kempville's surging Chiefs suffered a painful blow Friday night when Mike Downs, the Chiefs' leading scorer and one of the premier players in the area, fell to the floor against First Colonial.

Sporting a cast which was placed on his left foot Monday, Downs explained that the bone in his foot was chipped in two places and the ligaments were stretched. Downs said physicians would remove the cast in two weeks to check the injury, but he added, "They doubt very seriously if it will heal before six weeks."
